

New Year's Gift;

BEING, A

NEW ART of LOVE,

ADAPTED to the PRESENT TIMES.

Translated from the LATIN, with NOT

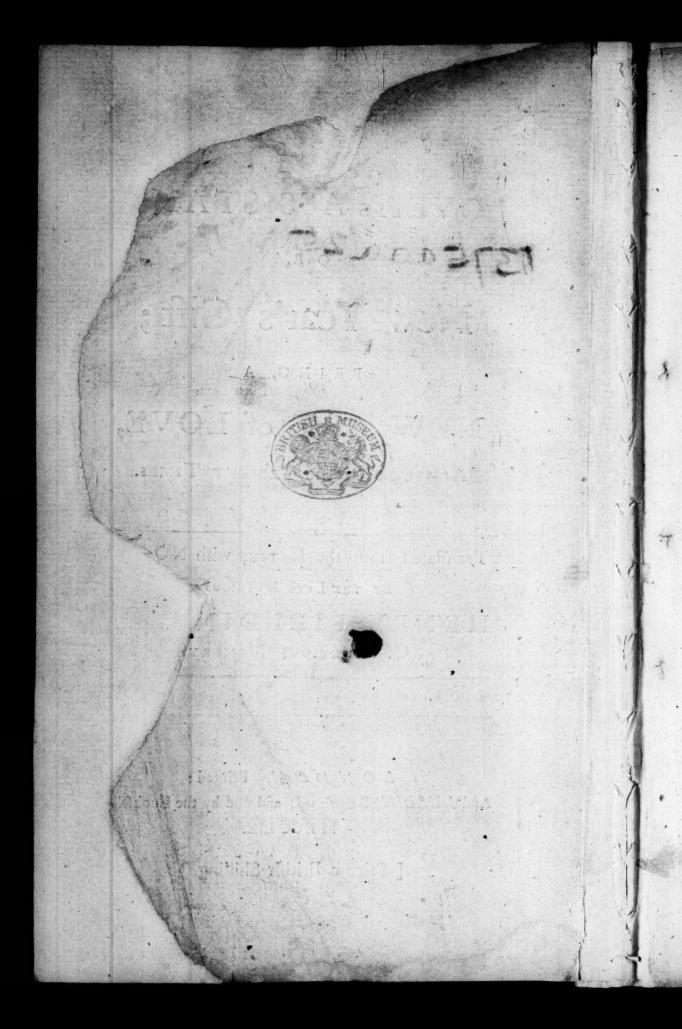

By THE LATE INCENIOUS

HENRY FIELDIN Of PETIOUS MEMORY.

And DUBLIN, Re-printed, and fold by the Bookfellers

M DCC LIX.

[Price a British Shilling.]

field to Mr. Dydon's Inchistion of ils Defonce, from the Profface

PREFACE.

ing to licentions as the Writings of feveral other Poets, both Consider La-confine him to Teams on the Kinntions of the Cone and Sammage, wet they

HIS Work was begun many Years ago, though altered in some Place by the Author, before his Death; as will appear by the modern Instances introduced in it. Many of which being so applicable to the present Time, is the Occasion of it being now published.

As to any Exception which may be made to the Impurity of this Work, we A 2 shall shall transcribe what was written long ago in its Defence, from the Preface prefixed to Mr. Dryden's Translation of this Poem.

PREFACE.

- 'A great many People are mistaken in these Books; and tho' they were made use of as a Pretence to drive the Author from the Court of Augustus, and confine him to Tomos on the Frontiers of the Getæ and Sarmatæ, yet they were not the true Cause of his Confinement. They are very far from being so licentious as the Writings of several other Poets, both Greek and Latin. However we must own he might have been a little more discreet, especially in some Places *.
- 'That which offended the Romans
 'most in this Work, cannot touch us.
 'It has always been more dangerous in 'Italy

* He means in the other two Books.

- ' Italy to converse with Women of Ho-
- ' nour, and frequent their Houses, than
- 'tis with us; where there is more Li-
- berty, and what in that Country may be an Occasion of Debauchery, would not
- at all be so in ours.
 - ' Notwithstanding all that has been said
- ' against these Books of the Art of Love, by some over-scrupulous Persons, whose
- Discretion has too much of Affectation
- ' in it: they are not only necessary for the
- ' Knowledge of the Latin Tongue, and
- the Roman History, concerning which
- they contain feveral Things very particu-
- · lar; but for the noble Sentiments we find
- ' in them, which the Gravest and Learn-
- edest Writers have thought worthy to be
- quoted for Authorities.
 - ' In a Word, there's nothing in them
- that comes near the Licence of some
- ' Epigrams of Catulhus, Martial, and
- ' Ausonius, of some Satires of Horace
- and Juvenal, and several other Pieces of Ancient and Modern Authors, which are read and commented upon; and about which even celebrated Jesuits and other religious Persons, as eminent for their Piety as their Erudition, have employed their Studies. Yet who has condemn'd or complain'd of them? We must confess, such Things should be managed with Address; and those of them who have meddled with any of the Authors I have named, have shewn that it may be done so, by their succeeding so happily in it.

As for this Treatise of the Art of Love, for which the Author has also prescrib'd a Remedy, as it is liable to be ill interpreted by those whose Pens poison every Thing they touch; so it may bear a good Construction, by such as know how to turn every Thing to Advantage.

'I will yet fay, this Art may be ap-'ply'd to those that intend to marry. 'There 'There is nothing fure against Decency in all that. I agree, if you will have it fo, that it extends fo far as to direct

one to the Means to gain a Mistress.

' If this was not lawful heretofore in

' Italy, on account of the jealous Humour

of the Italians, we cannot, for the same Reason only, say it ought to be for-' bidden in our Country, any more than

' in feveral others, provided we could be fure the Ladies Modesty would not be offended, before whom Youth should be always careful not to exceed the Bounds of the Respect that's due to ' them.'

To this I may add, that if the Objection of Impurity lies against any Part of this Work, it is only against the two latter Books, for in that which we have here paraphrased, there is nothing capable of offending the nicest Ear.

With regard to the Merit of this Paraphrase, which is entirely a new Undertaking, viii PRFFACE.

taking, and might perhaps, if properly encouraged, be carried on with other Latin I octs, we shall only observe, that the utmost Care bath been taken to preserve the Spirit and true Sense of the Author, and where we have been obliged to deviate, we have given the literal Translation in the Notes.

Upon the whole, we cannot suppress, what one of the most learned Men of this Age, said upon perusing the Paraphrase, viz. That he thought it would serve better to explain the Meaning of Ovid to a Learner, than any other Translation, or all his numerous Commentators.

through, there is earling decide of all

O V I D's

Me legal; E leiles commune docties an etc. Les silse verbane rites remagne en entake

quir in becatten counts non nowle accounting

ART of LOVE

A Figure in Towns but to engiler ere. The Frence printens increasing capacit amon't

A Tiploy & Adom See dear and resego. The guident form off. Else is wibis sape reposition

PARAPHRASED.

Plotte ides pressum stries it perfects Actualiers It pre animes molti considit arsis faros.

God tories floins, totics on terriith i fles, . . Se Credius anachum consilva fle senom.

(a) Flere Ocal of a the Exemples of Artemain, who was and Common of Artiller; and of Lither, who was after or Steel-

LIBER I.

SI quis in boc artem populo non novit amandi;

Me legat; & lecto carmine doctus amet.

Arte citæ veloque rates remoque reguntur:

Arte leves currus, arte regendus amor.

Curribus Automedon lentisque erat aptus babenis;

Tiphys in Æmonia puppe magister erat.

Me Venus artisicem tenero præfecit amori:

Tiphys & Automedon dicar amoris ego.

Ille quidem ferus est, & qui mihi sæpe repugnet;

Sed puer est; ætas mollis & apta regi.

Phyllirides puerum citharâ perfecit Achillen,

Atque animos molli contudit arte feros.

Qui toties socios, toties perterruit bostes,

Creditur annosum pertimuisse senem.

Quas

tl

fo

n

to m

in or I

of

A D m

m

ha

⁽a) Here Ovid uses the Examples of Automedon, who was the Coachman of Achilles; and of Tiphys, who was Pilot or Steersman to the Argonauts.

as Margar Jonfarus orat, pelcente magifico

Sound election page 3 and its attendence Dute.

Sed come Se conference and anny aratro:

the more easily ancer; squemois necessions in

BOOKI.

F in fo learned an Age as this, when Arts and Sciences are risen to such Perfection, there be any Gentleman unskilled in the Art of Loving, let him come to my School; where, if he hath any Genius, he will foon become an Adept: For I would by no means have any young Gentlemen think, that Erudition is unnecessary upon this Occasion, It is well known that the (a) Rules of Art are necessary to the Conduct of a Ship; for which reason, none but able and experienced Seamen are preferred to the Command of one. Rules are necessary even to make a good Coachman, as those Gentlemen who have the Ambition to excel this way very well know. In the fame manner is Art required to drive the Chariot of Love well. Now it hath pleased Venus to place me in the Coach-Box: What a Captain is to a Ship, or the Driver to his Chariot, that am I to Love. I own indeed Master Cupid is a little wild, and often stubborn; but he is only a Child, and of an Age to be disciplined: And however fierce the Disposition of a Lad may be, a judicious Schoolmafter knows very well how to correct it: For many a Boy who hath afterwards turned out a Hero, hath when at School very patiently submitted to the Lash, and quietly, at the Word of Command,

h

(0

to

b Y

fi

th th

m

B

na m

re

In

W

ei

a E m te in ma

Bir

Flo

He

No Sh and Po

masters as well as by ours.

(c) The Original introduces Achilles, who was the pupil of

(d) In the Original, -beld forth at his Master's Commands those Hands to be whipt, which Hector was hereafter to feel. The Indelicacy of which Image we have avoided applying to our British Hero.

(e) Both born of a Goddess.

held out his Hands to be whipt (b). Duke William (c) himself, when a Lad, very possibly submitted to Correction; and he (d) who was hereafter to become the Terror of his Enemies, might in his Youth have been asraid of his Tutor. Mr. Pointz was his Preceptor: I am the Preceptor of Love. Both these Youths were of a fierce Disposition, both elevated (e) in their Birth. But as the stoutest Ox submits himself to the Yoke, and the most fiery Horse to the Bridle, so shall Love to me. Though he may bend his Bow against my Breast, and shake his Torches at me; no matter: nay, the more he pierces me with his Arrows, the more he burns me, the more severely will I be revenged of him.

But here, Master Apollo, I will tell no lies to my Readers. I do not pretend to have received any Inspiration from you, any more than from Parson Whitesteld (f): And as for Miss Clio (g) and her eight Sisters, I never visit them; nor have I even a Cap-Acquaintance with them. I write from Experience only; and Experto crede Roberto is my Motto. I promise my Readers that I will tell them truth; and if I must, for form sake, invoke any Muse, Venus herself shall be the Per-

⁽f) This is transferred, we hope not improperly from Roman to British Superstition. The Latin alludes to Augury, and very justly ridicules the Folly of Divination by the Flight of Birds.

⁽g) Nor were Clio or ber Sisters seen by me, while I tended a Flock in the Valleys of Ascra. This Ascra was a Valley near the Helicon, which was the Residence of the Parents of Hesiod. Now Hesiod was fabled, whilst he was keeping his Father's Sheep, to have been led by the Muse to the Fountain Hippocrene; and being, I suppose, well ducked in that Water, commenced Poet.

Este procul, vittæ tenues, insigne pudoris; Quæque tegis medios, instita longa, pedes. Nos Venerem tutam, concessaque furta canemus; Inque meo nullum carmine crimen erit. Principio, quod amare velis, reperire labora, 35 Qui nova nunc primum miles in arma venis. Proximus buic labor est, placitam exorare puellam. Tertius, ut longo tempore duret amor. Hic modus; bæc noftro fignabitur area curru; Hæc erit admissa meta terenda rota. 40 Dum licet, & loris passim potes ire solutis, Elige, cui dicas, Tu mibi sola places. Hac tibi non veniet tenues delapsa per auras: Quærenda est oculis apta puella tuis. Scit bene venator cervis ubi retia tendat: 45

Aucu-

W

D It

W

fil

be

W

a.

m ati

wei cite not

tha furi

(b) This whole Passage is a manifest Burlesque on the Invocations with which the Ancients began their Poems. Not very different is that Sneer at the Beginning of the Metamorphofis, Scit bene qua frendens valle moretur aper.

Dii, captis, (NAM VOS MUTASTIS ET ILLAS) Adspirate -

But the strongest Piece of Burlesque of this kind is the Invocation to Venus at the Beginning of Lucretius: For what can be more so than a solemn Application to a Deity for her Assistance in a Work, the professed Intention of which is to expose the Belief of any Deity at all; and more particularly of any Concern which fuch superior Beings might be supposed to take in the Affairs of Men. For my own part, I must confess, I cannot perceive that graceful Air of Enthusiasm which a noble Author observes in the Invocation of the Antients; many of them indeed feem to have been too apparently in jest, to endeavour to impose on their Readers, and in reality to apply to the Muses with less Devotion than our modern Poets, many of whom perhaps believe as much in those Deities as in any other.

As.

fon (b). Sweet Goddess! then be thou present, and smile at my Undertaking. But as for you who cannot smile, I mean you, Prudes, with your screw'd Faces, which may be considered as Signs hung forth before the Door of Virtue, and which perhaps, like other Signs, promise what is not to be found in the House; I desire neither your Favour nor your Company. Good-natur'd Girls (i) are all I write to; and such I promise them may read my Works without a Blush.

Know then, my good Scholar, that art unexperienced in the Art of Love, that this Art confifts of three principal Points: First, to select a proper Mistress: Secondly, to win her Affections: And, Thirdly, to preserve your mutual Affection. Of all these therefore we will treat; or, to speak metaphorically, through these three Roads we will drive the Chariot we have undertaken to guide.

First then as to the Choice of a Mistress, to whom you may say, In Thee alone my Choice is fixed. Do not believe such a one will fall into your Lap. It will become you to look about sharp for her, and with all your Eyes, I do assure you. And here my first Instruction shall be, where she may most probably be found: For he is a bad Huntsman who would beat about the Royal-Exchange for a Hare or a Fox; and not a much better Gunner or Fisherman, who goes a shooting in Somerset-Gardens, or attempts to angle in the magnificent Bason there.

⁽i) Ovid would here infinuate, that the Courtezans only were the Subjects of the enfuing Poem; and in his Tristibus he cites these Lines, and pleads them in his Defence: But he is not over-honest in his Profession; for in many Parts it appears, that his Instructions are calculated for much more than concessa furta.

10

(1

ha

fo

fa

an fu

Ri

cit

wi.

Ha

who rece

Win

(2

of the Origi

lows

Sun 6

ble :

is call

As these all know the Places where their Game re-fort, fo must you.

Here then, I by no means advise you to make a long Voyage after a foreign Mistress, as Perseus did, who fetched Andromeda (k) from the Indies; or Paris, whom nothing would ferve but a Grecian Mistress. Your own Country, my Friend, will produce Women which the World cannot equal. Beauties are as plenty in the City of London as Apples in (1) Herefordsbire, or Grains of Wheat (m) in Hampsbire; they are indeed as plenty as Fish in the Sea, or Birds in the Air; nay, the Sky hath not more Stars than London hath Beauties: for England (n), not Cyprus, is the Queen of Love's favourite Island. Whether you love green Fruit, and which is in the Bud only, or Beauty in its fuller Bloom, or that which is arrived to perfect Ripeness; nay, if nothing but Wisdom or Sagacity will serve your turn, of these too Old England will afford you a sufficient Plenty.

In the pleasant Month of May, repair to Vaux-Hall (0). Here take your Evening Walk, either

round

was accordingly ty'd to a Rock, where she was espied by Perseus, who killed the Monster, and rescued the Lady; for which he received her at the Hands of her Parents as his Reward. The Story is told in the 4th Book of the Metamorphosis.

(1) Bunches of Grapes in Methymna; a City of Lesbia, the Wine of which Country was famous among the Ancients.

(m) Ears of Corn in Gargara; which was in Mossia, a Province of the Hellespont.

(n) The Original is, And the Mother of Æneas resides in the City of her Son. Æneas, from whom the Romans derived their Original, was the Son of Venus by Anchifes.

(o) The Original, rendered as literally as possible, is as follows: Walk at your ease under the Pompeian Shade, when the Sun enters the Herculean Lion; or where the Mother hath added her Benefactions to those of her Son; a work rich in foreign Marble: Nor avoid that Portico adorned with ancient Pictures, which is called Livia, from the Name of its Founder: nor that adorned by

to De Arte Amandia L	ib. I.
Aut, ubi muneribus nati sua munera mater	70
Addidit; externo marmore dives opus.	. not
Nec tibi vitetur, que, priscis sparsa tabellis,	onol
Porticus autoris Livia nomen habet.	did, v
Quâque parare necem miseris patruelibus ausa	or Pa
Belides, & Stricto stat ferus ense pater.	75
Nec te prætereat Veneri ploratus Adonis;	Beauc
Cultaque Judão septima sacra Syro.	Apple
Neu fuge Linigeræ Memphitica sacra juvencæ;	(M) नितिन
Multas illa facit, quod fuit ipfa Jovi.	hatin
when (n), not Cara is the Oncen of Lova's	E

the Statues of the Belides, who attempted the Lives of their unfortunate Cousins; and where you see the cruel Father standing with his drawn Sword: Nor pass by the Temple of Venus and her lamented Adonis; nor omit the Seventh-Day Festivals of the Jews; nor the Egyptian Temples of the Linnen-clad Heiser: She makes many Women to be that which she herself was to Jupiter.

To explain these several Particulars to an English Reader, it must be known, that the Portico's in Rome were the publick Walks; and here Persons of both Sexes used to assemble. mong these was one built by Pompey. The second Portico mentioned, is by the best Commentators understood of the Offavian, which was built by Octavia, Sifter to Augustus, and Mother to Marcellus; and this adjoined to a Temple built by the same Marcellus. The third Portice was built by Livia the Wife of Augustus, and called from her Name. The fourth, where the Picture of the Belides was, is to be understood of the Portico of Apollo Palatinus, in which were the Statues of the fifty Daughters of Danaus and Grandaughters of Belas. These being married to the fifty Sons of their Uncle Agyptus, every one, by her Father's Command, flew her Husband on the first Night, fave only Hypermnestra. For this they were punished in the lower World, by being obliged to fill a Barrel full of Holes with Water. Scaliger and others have here made a miltake, supposing the Picture of the Belides was here hung up: But the contrary appears by many Authorities, particularly by this in Ov. Trift. 3.

Signa

round the verdant Scenes, where Nightingales, the only Foreigners who give us their Songs for nothing, warble their most delicious Notes. When your Limbs demand Repose, you may enjoy it in an Alcove, from whence the embattel'd Troops of Venus will pass in review before you. Again, the losty Dome of Ranelagh invites your Steps. Whether the illustrious Artist took his Model from that House, which as a Reward for their Industry, or for some little regard for their Honey, the benevolent Nature of Man hath conferred on that laborious Animal the Bee: Or whether a more pious Disposition chose this Form from the musical Instrument which summons the whole Parish Signa peregrinis ubi sunt alterna columnis, Belides, & stricto barbarus ense pater.

k - - d y e

1,

e

e fe

y

n

25

ė,

e

ia

It appears that the Number of Pillars was equalled by the Number of Statues. 5thly, The Temple of Venus, in which she was worshipped, together with Adonis, after the Assyrian manner. This Adonis was the Son of Cinyras King of Cyprus, begotten by him on his own Daughter Myrrba. The Fame of his Beauty, and the Passion which Venus bore towards him, are well known. 6thly, The Jewish Synagogues. The Jews having been encouraged by Julius Cæsar, were very numerous in Rome at that time; and the Strangeness and Pomp of their Ceremonies inviting the Curiofity of the Roman Ladies, their Synagogues became famous Places of Intrigue. 7. The Temple of Iss. This Goddess, when a Woman, was called Io: She was the Daughter of Inachus; and being beloved by Jupiter, was by him, to preferve her from his Wife's Jealoufy, turned into a Heiser, Juno suspecting the Fact, obtained this Heiser of her Husband, and set Argus to watch over her. Jupiter wanting to visit his old Friend, sent Mercury to kill Argus; in revenge of which, Juno ordered a Gad-Bee to sting the poor Heifer; which thereupon growing mad, ran to Egypt, where fhe was again restored to the Shape of a Woman, and married to Osiris. The Feast of Isis was celebrated in Rome ten Days together by the Women, and was a time of Carnival among them.

to Ge

ftr

or

of

He ing

the

Ar

his riv

de

Car he Ai Tr Qu

Be

lon

Ey

poi

Ru Pla lan and Na

and Sce fon

Ver to fen Spe fine

Et fora conveniunt (quis credere posset ?) amori; 80 Flammaque in arguto sæpe reperta foro. Subdita qua Veneris facto de marmore templo Appias expressis aëra pulsat aquis. Illo sape loco capitur consultus Amori; Quique aliis cavit, non cavet ipse sibi. Illo sæpe loco desunt sua verba diserto; Resque novæ veniunt, causaque agenda sua est. Hunc Venus è templis, que sunt confinia, ridet. Qui modò patronus, jam cupit esse cliens.

Signat parteriories with their enternal of armin

Believer, is friend timenary at the

was worth organ to weeker with wife in aster the affection

art. The Same, was the Son of Trans King of Lagran

A residence of the value of the material economics.

to the minimum actions on the desired and actions in the second actions of the second ac

Sed

to Church: Or whether the wondrous Force of Genius, unaffifted by any Model, did not of itself strike out this wondrous Architecture; let Kent or Benson inquire. Hither, from every Corner of the Town, repair the loveliest Nymphs. Here too thou may'ft furvey them, either walking or reposed on Benches at thy Ease. Nor is the Mall to be neglected, where once the brawny Arm of Charles displayed its Strength, and beat his fubtle Courtiers at the Play, whence it derives its Name. Nor, Kenfington, must thy Gardens be passed by, once the Delight of mighty Caroline, and to the future Age a Monument of her Taste. Here the Charmers draw in sweet Air, and fend it forth again in fweeter Sighs, as Tributes to the loved Memory of that mighty Queen. As for the Ring, formerly the Scene of Beauty's many Triumphs, it is now become a lonely deserted Place: Brilliants and brilliant Eyes no longer sparkle there: No more the heedless Beau falls by the random Glance, or wellpointed Fan. The Ring is now no more: Yet Ruckholt, Marybone and The Wells furvive: Places by no means to be neglected by the Gallant: for Beauty may lurk beneath the Straw Hat. and Venus often clothes her lovely Limbs in Stuffs. Nay, the very Courts of Law are not excluded; and the Scenes of Wrangling are fometimes the In that Hall where Thames Scenes of Love. fometimes overflowing, washes the Temple of Venus Lucy, the grave Serjeant becomes a Victim to the Fair; and he who fo well knows how to defend others, cannot defend himself. Here the Special Pleader loses all Power to Demurr, and finds beyond his Expectation a novel Assignment

De Arte Amandi	Lib. I.
Sed tu præcipue curvis venare theatris;	99
Hæt loca sunt voto fertiliora tuo :	Genius
Hlic invenies, quod ames, quod ludere possis,	ftrike
Quodque semel tangas, quodque tenere velis.	na 10
Ut redit, itque frequens longum formica per agm	en,
Granifero solitum dum vehit ore cibum;	95
Aut ut apes, saltúsque suos & olentia nactæ	AA 2011 o ma A
Pascua, per flores & thyma summa volant;	in aid
Sie ruet in celebres cultissima fæmina ludos;	25911
Copia judicium sape morata meum.	Gens I
Spectatum veniunt, veniunt spectentur ut ipsa.	100
Ille locus casti damna pudoris babet.	Air, al
Primus sollicitos fecisti, Romule, ludos,
Cum juvit viduos rapta Sabina viros.	Beauty
Tunc neque marmoreo pendebant vela theatro;	Venel
Nec fuerant liquido pulpita rubra croco.	105
Illic, quas tulerant nemorosa palatia, frondes
Simpliciter positæ; scena sine arte fuit.	elskou A.
In gradibus sedit populus de cespite factis;	Places
Qualibet birsutas fronde tegente comas.	Lebra
Respiciunt oculisque notant sibi quisque puellam,	110
Quam velit; & tacito pectore multa movent.
Dumque, rudem præbente modum tibicine Thusco),
Ludius æquatum ter pede pulsat bumum;	Frage.
In medio plaufu, (plaufus tunc arte carebat,)	to the
Rex populo prædæ signa petenda dedit.	115
Day Program of the state of the	Protinus

moff ahhh ti Hh dith wfolynaT

fpring up in the Cause. Him Venus Lucy (p) laughs at from her neighbouring Temple; for the Council is now become the Client, and squeezes an empty Hand harder than he ever did a full one. But above all, the Theatres are the Place of Sport: for these will be most fruitful to your Wishes. Here you will find one Object to love, and another to toy with. Some, of whom a fingle Touch will fuffice, and others, in whom you will defire a stronger Tenure. Neither do the Ants in pursuit of Grain, or the Bees in quest of Flowers, swarm in greater Numbers than the Beauties to the Thea-The variety of Charmers here have often distracted my Choice. Hither they come to fee, and to be themselves seen; and many are the Love-Bargains here made.

And now, Friend, I will tell you a Story. Roenulus was the first Person who ever made this use of the Theatre, when he ordered his Soldiers to fall foul on the Sabine Ladies, whom he invited to a Play acted by his Command. Not that I would have you think, that Theatre was like the Playhouse in Covent-Garden, enriched with Scenes, Machines, and other Decorations. To fay the truth, it was no better than a Barn, or Booth. Here he affembled the Sabine Girls, and ordered his Romans to chuse every Man his Miss. did so, and while the poor Girls thought no Harm, those Fellows felt strange Emotions within. while a certain Dancer, called, The Ludio, was performing a Tambourine, which I suppose took greatly at that time, Romulus on a sudden gave the Signal for falling on. This was inftantly obeyed. They all rushed in, laid their Hands upon the

⁽p) In Cæsar's Forum, which was built on the Appian Way, was the Temple of Venus Genetrix.

B

te

lo

ec

Feth

fti

A

an

Bu

in

the

We

my

I p Mo

you

Ge

die bea Cor

fecr

the head

be

Protinus exiliunt, animum clamore fatentes, Virginibus cupidas inficiuntque manus. Ut fugiunt aquilas, timidiffima turba, columbæ; Utque fugit vifos agna novella lupos; Sic ille timuêre viros fine lege ruentes; Constilit in nulla, qui fuit ante color. Nam timor unus erat, facies non una timoris; Pars laniat crines; pars fine mente sedet. Altera mæsta filet, frustra vocat altera matrem; Hæc queritur, stupet bæc; bæc fugit, illa manet. Ducuntur raptæ, genialis præda, puellæ; 126 Et potuit multas ipse decere pudor. Siqua repugnabat nimium, comitemque negabat; Sublatam cupido vir tulit ipfe finu. Atque ità, Quid teneros lacrymis corrumpis ocellos? Quod matri pater est, boc tibi, dixit, ero. 131 Romule, militibus scisti dare commoda solus; Hæc mibi si dederis commoda, miles ero. Scilicet ex illo solennia more theatra Nunc quoque formosis insidiosa manent.

manarate , a clair tuppolo took ereat-

Levelo, charitat towards seed on a land for vell might off no fled any distribution of the washing To make of Face Courte

Nec

which and S Girls, and soon gave them sufficient Tokens of their Purpose.

As the Doves, who are the most timorous of Birds, fly from Eagles; or as the young Lamb runs from Wolves, as foon as fhe fees them, fo terrified were these Ladies, at the Men rushing upon them, in this unlawful manner. The Colour forfook their Cheeks at once. All were equally in a Fright, though they discovered their Fear by different Symptoms. Some of them tear their Hair, others fit in Amazement, Terror strikes some dumb, others call in vain for the Affiftance of their Mammas. One cries out, another is shocked to death; one stands still, another endeavours to get out of the House. But all their Endeavours are vain; and perhaps indeed their Blushes heightened their Beauty; they were all led off, and those who would not go were carried. Methinks, I hear one of their Gallants thus addressing his weeping Fair. Wby, my Dear, will you spoil those lovely Eyes with Tears? I promise you, you shall be served no worse than your Mother hath been before. I will only do to you, what your Father did to her. Ah Romulus! Romulus! no General ever better knew how to reward his Soldiers; I promise you, that when I hear your Drum beating up for Voluntiers, I will enlift under your Command.

Ever fince that time, the Theatre hath been confecrated to Love, and many a pretty Girl, fince the Sabines, hath owed the Loss of her Maidenhead to it.

Other Places of publick Meeting may likewise be frequented, as Horse Races (q) and the like.

⁽q) Races were run at Rome in April in the Circus Maximus, which was likewise the Scene of many other public Exercises and Shews.

Nec te nobilium fugiat certamen equorum:	Nie
Multa capax populi commoda Circus babet.	rio di
Nil opus est digitis, per quos arcana loquaris:	ul) al miG
Nec tibi per nutus accipienda nota est.	anur
Proximus à domina, nullo probibente, sedeto:	140
Junge tuum lateri, quam potes, usque latus.	noqu
Et bene, quod cogit, si nolit, linea jungi;	supo
Quod tibi tangenda est lege puella loci.
Hic tibi quæratur socii sermonis origo;	mont Arik-
Et moveant primos publica verba sonos,	145
Cujus equi veniant, facito, studiose, requiras;
Nec mora ; quisquis erit, cui favet illa, fave.	BHOLE Feat
At cum pompa frequens calestibus ibit Eburnis;	indee
Tu Veneri dominæ plaude, favente manu.	dacy
Utque fit, in gremium pulvis si forte puellæ	150
Deciderit, digitis excutiendus erit.	Lam
Et, si nullus erit pulvis, tamen excute nullum.	1 200
Quælibet officio causa sit apta tuo.	1-25-20-2

0

y

a V

po

De

in cei

And especially public Shews, which never fail of Women. Here get upon a crouded Scaffold, and fit next to the Girl you like. Squeeze yourfelf as close to her as you can; for Custom here countenances fuch fqueezing whether the pretty Creatures will or no. Here find some Opportunity to begin a Discourse; you will not be driven to talk upon your Fingers, or by Signs, but may use your Tongue *. Begin then with News, or the Chitchat of the Town. Nay, the Shew itself will afford a Subject: for instance supposing it was my Lord Mayor's Shew, you may ask her what Alderman that Coach, or those Liveries belong to; and be fure to admire the same with herself: Do not omit moreover, to give her an early Intimation of your Gallantry, and that you are a Woman's Man. If it should happen that any one of the Aldermen should be a greater Cuckold than the rest of his Brethren; take care to titter at his Appearance; and while the Pageants (r) are passing by, endeavour to find out a Resemblance of Horns in some of them. All those Things have a remote Tendency to this great Point.

If a Grain of Snuff should happen to fall on the Lady's Bosom, wipe it off with your Fingers; and if none fall, wipe off that none. Take every Opportunity to be as officious in her Service as possible D 2

^{*} These Verses are transposed from the Place in which they stand in the Original, and this, I think, with Advantage to the Connection.

⁽r) And when the Procession shall pass on with the Ivory Deities, do you applaud most the Statue of Lady Venus. Thus the Original. The Paraphrase preserves the same Sense, though in other Circumstances. These Statues were carried in Procession on many Occasions, particularly at the Mægalesian Games.

Quid ?

fi ta ir u

de N ha

or

for Pl was on his

Gu we and Sig

his he

the

The Britisieft.

Place takes Gran tered is as trans

fible. If she drop her Fan or Gloves, presently take them up; for this you will have sure Reward in the very Fact, for you may at the same time lift up her Petticoat and see her Legs.

Be careful that the Person who sits behind her doth not press her tender Back with his Knee. Small Matters captivate light Minds. Many a Man hath drawn considerable Advantage from handing (s) a Lady to her Coach, by gallanting her Fan, or even by taking up her Clog (t).

Nor will (u) Tower-bill, when the Tragic Scaffold is strewed with Saw-Dust, be an improper Place to begin your Intrigue: for Cupid himself always attends, and acts the Part of an Executioner on such Occasions; many a poor Man having lost his Heart, while he hath attended to another's losing his Head. While the Fair-One carelessly laying her Hand on his, argues concerning the Criminal's Guilt, and offers to lay a Wager that he will die well; the wounded Lover seels a sudden Stroke, and is not better able to bear the Smart without a Sigh.

(w) If it was the Custom of England to imitate the Romans in insulting over the Conquered, what

Spectacles

(s) Adjusting ber cusbion.

(t) Putting a Foot-stool under her.

(u) The Original mentions the Fights of the Gladiators. The Paraphrase comes as near as our Customs admit; for British Ladies never attend to see Men kill one another in jest.

(av) Augustus Cæsar among other rich Shews, with which he entertained the People, exhibited to them a Sea-Fight in a Place dug on purpose near the Banks of the Tyber. The Poet takes this Occasion of introducing many Compliments to the Grandson of this Prince. We have done little more than altered Names in this Place; and as we are assured all here said is as properly applicable to the noble Person to whom we have transferred it, the learned Reader will admire that any Pas-

v

0

(2

tv

W

Fi

W co

fee He

Quid? modo cum belli navalis imagine Cæfar
Persidas induxit, Cecropidasque rates?
Nempe ab utroque mari juvenes, ab utroque puelle
Venêre: atque ingens orbis in urbe fuit. 175
Quis non invênit, turba quod amaret in illa?
Ebeu, quam multos advena torsit amor!
Ecce parat Cæsar domito, quod defuit, orbi,
Addere, nunc, oriens ultime, noster eris.
Parthe, dabis pænas, Crassi, gaudete, sepulti, 180
Signaque barbaricas non bene passa manus;
Ultor adest, primisque ducum profitetur in armis;
Bellaque non puero tractat agenda puer.
Parcite natales, timidi, numerare deorum:
Cæsaribus virtus contigit ante diem. 185
Ingenium caleste suis velocius annis Surgit, & ignavæ fert male damna moræ.
Parvus erat, manibusque duos Tirynthius angues Pressit; & in cunis jam Jove dignus erat.
Nunc quoque qui puer es, quantus tum, Bacche, fuisti
Cum timuit thyrsos India vieta tuos! 191
Auspiciis animisque patris, puer, arma movebis;
Et vinces animis auspiciisque patris.
Tale rudimentum tanto sub nomine debes;
Nunc juvenum princeps, deinde future senum. 195

erad swimmer with the collection of the solution of which we have it as a second state of the solution of the second state of

The converge of the Propie, enhanced to them a Secretarian of the same of the Community of the Community of the Complication of the converge o

Spectacles might have formerly been exhibited! How many French Youths and Virgins might have followed the Chariot-Wheels of our Monarchs! In that Case many a poor English Heart must have submitted to a French Conquest, and Beauty would have been triumphant in Chains. Nay, I prophefy we shall again see those victorious Times. Our Mighty George now meditates new Triumphs, and France (x) shall be punished as she ought. Rejoice, O ye Shades (y), whose Bodies lie buried in the Plains of Fontenoy, where British Colours were polluted by Gallie Hands. WILLIAM your Avenger comes. The General in him shone forth in his first Campaign, and while a Youth, he managed War beyond his Years. Let not his Age therefore deter us from ranking him among our greatest Commanders. His Warlike Genius fprings forth and out-runs his Years, impatient of the fluggish Pace of Time. The Swedish Charles (z) was scarce beyond a Child when he crushed two mighty Enemies at once; Charles (a) the German Prince, yet but a Youth, what was he when he past the Rhine and terrified the Host of France? Thy Father's Genius, WILLIAM, and his Courage shall inspire thy youthful Arms. With that Genius and that Courage shalt thou conquer. Such Beginnings dost thou owe to the mighty Name of thy illustrious Sire; that thou who art the Noblest of all young Commanders mayst fage in an antient Author can be so apposite to the present Times, and the true English Reader will be no less delighted to see Ovid introduced as singing forth the Praises of the British Hero.

I

⁽x) Parthia.

⁽y) The Craff.

⁽z) Hercules.

⁽a) Bacchus.

Cum tibi sint fratres, fratres ulciscere læsos:

Cumque pater tibi sit, jura tuere patris.

Induit arma tibi genitor patriæque tuusque:

Hostis ab invito regna parente rapit.

Tu pia tela feres, sceleratas ille sagittas;
Stabit pro signis jusque piumque tuis.

Vincuntur Parthi causa, vincantur & armis:

Eoas Latio dux meus addat opes.

Marsque pater, Cæsarque pater, date numen eunti:

Nam Deus è vobis alter es, alter eris.

Auguror en; vinces: votivaque carmina reddam,

Et magno nobis ore sonandus eris.

Confistes: aciemque meis bortabere verbis:

O desint animis ne mea verba tuis!

Tergaque Parthorum, Romanaque pectora dicam;
Telaque ab averso que jacet hostis equo.

Quid fugis, ut vincas? quid victos, Parthe, relinquis?

Parthe, malum jam nunc Mars tuus omen habet.

Ergo erit illa dies, qua tu, pulcherrime rerum, Quatuor in niveis aureus ibis equis?

Ibunt ante duces onerati colla catenis:

Ne possint tuti, qua prius, esse fuga.

Spectabunt juvenes læti, mistæque puellæ:
Diffundetque animos omnibus ista dies.

200

210

12, th lit

th

fid Cu

Aique

mayst hereaster become the sirst among the old. 'Tis time to avenge the Injuries attempted to thy House, and to maintain thy glorious Father's Rights. Thy Country's Father and thy own, girts on thy Sword, and thy Cause is no less glorious than thy Arms. In both is France inferiour, and to both shall yield. I prophesy, that thou shalt conquer, and to thy Conquest I dedicate my votive Prayers, prepared hereaster to resound thy Praise; when we shall see thee, most lovely Prince, returning, thy Glories far outshining the Gold in which thou art attired. Thee shall Crouds of Youths and beauteous Virgins hail from their crouded Windows as thou passes, and universal Joy shall overspread each British Face on that blest Day.

If then, my Scholar, thou shouldst happen to be placed in a Window near some lovely Girl, who, fired with the Glories of the young Conqueror, should enquire into all his matchless Labours (b), his Wound at Dettingen; his Danger and Intrepidity at Fontenoy; his Toils at home, in defiance of Cold and Fatigue; his Pursuit to Carlisse; his Victory at Culloden; and many more which will then be as well known; repeat all if thou canst, and if thy Memory sails, go on nevertheless: for Invention cannot here outdo the Reality, and thy Fictions shall recommend thee equal with Truth to her Ears.

Again, when thou dost fit down at table among the Women, thou may'st reap other Pleasures be-fides those of Wine: For, to speak figuratively, Cupid with glowing Cheeks often presses the Horns E

⁽b) The Original here describes the many Nations who are led Captives.

Atque aliqua ex illis, cum regum nomina quæret,
Que loca, qui montes, queve ferantur aque;	220
Omnia responde, nec tantum siqua rogabit :
Et quæ nescieris, ut bene nota, refer.
Hic est Euphrates præcinctus arundine frontem:	anorr
Cui coma dependet cærula, Tygris erit.	Tion!
Hos facito Armenios : bæc est Danaëia Persis :	225
Urbs in Achæmeniis vallibus ista fuit.
Ille, vel ille, duces. Et erunt quæ nomina dicas
Si poteris, vere; si minus, apta tamen.	ROJ).
Dant etiam positis aditum convivia mensis;
Est aliquid, præter vina, quod inde petas.	230
Sæpe illic positi, teneris adducta lacertis
Purpureus Bacchi cornua pressit amor.
Vinaque cum bibulas sparsere Cupidinis alas,
Permanet, & capto stat gravis ille loco.
Ille quidem pennas velociter excudit udas;	235
Sed tamen aspergi pettus amore nocet.
Vina parant animos, faciuntque caloribus aptos,
Cura fugit, multo diluiturque mero.
Tunc veniunt risus: tunc pauper cornua sumit:
Tunc dolor & cura, rugaque frontis abit.	240
Tunc aperit mentes avo rarissima nostro
Simplicitas; artes excutiente Deo.
Illic sæpe animos juvenum rapuere puellæ:
Et Venus in vinis, ignis in igne fuit.
Hic tu fallaci nimium ne crede lucernæ;	245
Judicio formæ noxque merumque nocet.
	Luce

of Bacchus in his tender Arms; and the Wings of the little God of Love being wetted with Wine, he is unable to fly off: And if he happens to shake his wet Wings, he may possibly sprinkle the Bosom of your Mistress with Love.

In more intelligible Language, Wine fills our Minds with Courage, and makes them susceptible of other warm Passions. Care slies away, and is dissolved in much Liquor. Then comes Laughter; the poor Man becomes bold, and Grief and Solicitude, and knitted Brows vanish. Then it is that Simplicity, a rare Virtue in our Age, opens our Hearts, Wine having divested us of Cunning. At this Season, many a watchful young Fellowhath gained the Heart of his Mistress (c) And Love hath sprung from Wine, as the Flame doth from Fire.

However, do not confide too much at this time to the Light of a Candle: for Night and Wine obstruct us in forming a true Judgment of Beauty. Paris beheld the Goddesses in open Daylight, when he gave the Preference to Venus. Indeed by Candle-light, and in a Side-Box, almost every one is a Beauty: Jewels, Clothes, and Women, are all best discerned by the Light of the Sun.

And here if I should recount all the rural Haunts in which a Lover may find his Game, I might write more Volumes than Oldmixon. Tunbridge, and Scarborough, and Cheltenham, and Holt, and many other Places shall be therefore E 2 omitted:

⁽c) Here we have inverted the Original; but fure the Sense upholds us in so doing.

on br his are

wh Be ma

inf thy nov to

for the Sm I eve you the formed Diode Work (e) It flow with the wind with the wind Year, Scyth.

Luce Deas cwloque Paris spectavit aperto;
Cum dixit Veneri, vincis utramque, Venus.
Notte latent mendæ, vitioque ignoscitur omni;
Horaque formosam quamlibet illa facit.	250
Consule de gemmis, do tineta murice lana,
Consule de facie corporibusque diem.	*
Quid tibi famineos catus venatibus aptos
Enumerem? numero cedat arena meo.
Quid referam Baias, prætextaque littora velis,	255
Et, quæ de calido sulphure fumat, aquam?
Hinc aliquis vulnus referens in pectore dixit,
Non bæc, (ut fama est) unda salubris erat.
Ecce suburbanæ templum nemorale Dianæ,	.
Partaque per gladios regna nocente manu,	260
Illa quod est virgo, quod tela Cupidinis odit, Multa dedit populo vulnera, multa dabit.
Hactenus, unde legas quod ames, ubi retia tendas;
Præcipit imparibus vecta Thalia rotis.	1057
Nunc tibi que placuit, quas sit capienda per artes,	265
Dicere præcipue molior artis opus.	ATT.
Quisquis ubique viri, faciles advertite mentes,
Pollicitisque favens, vulgus, adesto meis.
Prima tuæ menti veniat fiducia, cunctas
Posse capi; capies: tu modo tende plagas.	270

Vere

omitted; but, Bath (d), thy sulphurous Waters must not be past by. Hence Master Dapperwit bringing home the Wounds made by fair Eyes in his Bosom, cries out, on his Return, The Waters are not so wholesome as they are reported; I have received more Harm than Good at the Place.

Here rises the Temple (e) of the God (CNASH), whose Walls are hung round with the Portraits of Beauties. The Apotheosis of this God hath cost many a poor Man his Heart.

Thus far, my Scholar, I have endeavoured to instruct thee in what Places thou art to hunt for thy Game, and where to spread thy Net. I will now proceed to shew thee by what Means Puss is to be taken, when you have found her Sitting.

Mind all, as my old Schoolmaster used to say: for I assure you my Instructions will be worthy the Attention of both the Great Vulgar and the Small.

My first Lesson then is: Be consident. Believe every Woman is to be come at. Do but spread your Net, and I warrant she runs into it.

Sooner shall the Birds be silent in the Spring, or the Frogs in the Winter: Sooner shall the Greyhound

⁽d) Baiæ, a Place not far from Naples, famous for wholefome as well as pleasant Baths. It is described very largely by Diodorus; and Horace mentions it as the pleasantest Place in the World.

⁽e) In the Original, the Temple of Diana in the Suburbs. It stood in a Grove not far from Rome. The next Line, Partaque per gladios, &c. alludes to a very fingular Custom, by which the Priests of this Temple succeeded to each other, viz. by Conquest in single Combat, for which every Slave or Fugitive was admitted to contend, and the Victor was rewarded with the Priesthood. This Practice was renewed every Year, and was, as Strabo informs us, originally taken from the Scythians.

Vere prius volucres taceant, estate cicade,	* 377
Menalius lepori det sua terga canis,
Fæmina quam juveni blande tentata repugnet:
Hæc quoque, quam poteris credere nolle, volet.
Utque viro furtiva Venus, sic grata puella:	275
Vir male dissimulat : tectius illa cupit.
Conveniat maribus, ne quam nos ante rogemus;
Fæmina jam partes victa rogantis agat.
Mollibus in pratis admugit fæmina tauro:
Fæmina cornipedi semper adhinnit equo.	280
Fortior in nobis, nec tam furiosa libido est:
Legitimum finem flamma virilis babet.
Byblida quid referam, vetito que fratris amore
Arst, & est laqueo fortiter ulta nefas?
Myrrha patrem, sed non ut filia debet, amavit:	285
Et nunc obducto cortice pressa latet.	0.13
Illius & lacrymis, quas arbor fundit odora,	1107 Theringer & doming a morning courts tonet

the

n wit the

My

hound run away from the Hare, than a Woman shall resist the Youth who gently assails her. Though she skrews up her Face ever so demurely, she will at length yield to his Persua-sions.

A dark Corner is as agreeable to a Girl, as to one of us, though we cannot so well dissemble our Desires as she can; but if we should once enter into a Consederacy against the Sex to leave off courting them, they would soon begin to act the Part of Lovers, and come a wooing to us.

And what is this but a natural Affection, common to the Females of every other Species, who often make love to the Males? And give me leave to tell the Ladies, that we are more able to command our Affections, nor are our Defires fo furious, and exceeding all Bounds, as theirs.

The Story of Byblis (f) is too well known to be related, who being in love with her Brother. punished her Crime with her own Hands, and hanged herself in her Garters.

85

Miss Myrrha (g) loved her Papa with an Affection improper for a Daughter; for which

(f) Byblis fell in love with her Brother Caunus; and upon his rejecting her Addresses, hanged herself. The Poets seign she was afterwards turned into a Fountain. See Metam. IX.

(g) Myrrha was the Daughter of Cinyras, who being in love with her Father, took an Opportunity, while her Mother was employed in the Sacrifices to Ceres, to supply her Place. Her Father discovering the Imposture, ran after her with a drawn Sword to kill her: But she escaped by means of the Night, and sled into Sabæa. She was changed into the Myrrh-Tree. The Story of which is in Metam X. But though the Poets have subjoined Fable to this Fact, it is related by Pliny as a true History.

De Arte Amandi.	Lib. I.
Forte sub umbrosis, nemorosæ vallibus Idæ,
Candidus armenti gloria taurus erat;	290
Signatus tenui media inter cornua nigro:
Una fuit labes, cætera lactis erant.
Illum Gnossidiadesque, Sidoniæque juvencæ
Optarunt tergo sustinuisse suo.	1
Pasiphaë sieri gaudebat adultera tauri:	295
Invida formosas oderat illa boves.
Nota cano: non boc, que centum sustinet urbes,
Quamvis sit mendax, Creta negare potest.
Ipsa novas frondes, & prata tenerrima tauro
Fertur inadsueta subsecuisse manu.	300
It comes armentis: nec ituram cura moratur
Conjugis: & Minos à bove victus erat.

Quo

the second secon

Min a H a v enjoi fpru was The

she was turned into a Tree. I do assure you the Story is true; and the Tree now drops continual Tears for her Offence, which we use as a Persume; and they retain the Lady's Name.

In the shady Valleys of Ida (b), there was a white Bull, which was the Glory of the Farmer to whom he belonged. This Bull had a beautiful black Speck between his Horns, all the rest of his Body being as white as Milk. With him the Gnossian and Cydonian Heifers were all in love. and eagerly longed to be embraced by him in the tenderest manner in which Bulls embrace the Fair Sex of Cows. Pafiphaë, I am very forry to fay it, conceived a Passion worse, if possible, than that of Mrs. Mary Hamilton, for this Bull. Lady is not more envied in the Drawing-Room than was every handsome Heifer by this unfortunate Woman. The Story is fo well known, that there is not a Freethinker (i) in the Age who can refuse his Credit to it, though they believe nothing which they cannot fee and account for. This poor Girl is reported to have mowed the sweetest Grass with her own Hands for her beloved Bull. She likewife wandered about among the Cows, without the least Regard to Mr. Alderman

⁽b) Pasiphaë was the Daughter of the Sun, married to Minos King of Crete. The Poets feign that being in love with a Bull, she employed Dædalus, a famous Artist, to make her a wooden Cow, into which she conveyed herself, in order to enjoy her monstrous Desires. From this unnatural Coition sprung the Minotaur, a Monster half Man and half Bull, which was inclosed in a Labyrinth, and afterwards destroyed by Theseus.

⁽i) The Original alludes to the Cretans, who were famous among the Antients for the Vice of lying.

34 De Arte Amandi. L	ib. I.
Quò tibi, Pasiphaë, pretiosas sumere vestes?	(h)a
Iste tuus nullas sentit adulter opes.	Silve
Quid tibi cum speculo montana armenta petenti?	305
Quid toties positas singis, inepta, comas?	Mair
Crede tamen speculo, quod te negat esse juvencam:	TIL.
Quàm cuperes fronti cornua nata tuæ!	or of
Sive placet Minos; nullus quæratur adulter:	liffe
Sive virum mavis fallere; falle viro.	310
In nemus & saltus thalamo regina relicto	- 1500 - 1500
Fertur, ut Aonio concita Baccha Deo.	obnat tende
Ab quoties vultu vaccam spectavit iniquo,	Tigil
Et dixit, Domino cur placet ista meo!	lay it:
Aspice ut ante ipsum teneris exsultat in berbis.	315
Nec dubito, quin se stulta placere putet.	mad
Dixit; & ingenti jamdudum de grege duci
Jussit, & immeritam sub juga curva trabi:	orlar
Aut cadere ante aras commentaque sacra coëgit:	.9%+1
Et tenuit lætå pellicis exta manu.	320
Pellicibus quoties placavit numina cæsis?	vols
Atque ait enta tenens, Ite, placete meo!

forming the Artener, a Atendar self felten and hair field will was included in a lashyrineli, and abeginning detention. Theren

Alderman Minos her Husband; for a Bull had totally supplanted him in her Esteem. Alas! Pahphaë, to what purpose are the brocaded Petticoats? Your Gallant is not sensible of your Finery. Why do you consult your Looking-Glass, in order to pursue the Mountain-Herds? Or why with fo much Art do you fet your Tête? If you will confult your Glass, let it inform you you are no Hei-Ah! how defirous are you to have those Horns on your own Forehead, which you intend to graft on your Husband's! It would be better to preferve your Virtue, and be constant to the Alderman, if you can like him: But if you must make a Cuckold of him, do it at least with a young Fellow. No; nothing but a Bull will fuffice. She leaves the Alderman's House, and flies away to the Groves and Mountains. To fay the truth, I believe she used to drink away her Senses; and that is the best Excuse for her. Ah! how often hath the cast a jealous Eye on some Heifer! and cried out, Why should that vixen please my Love? Rehold, fays she, bow the Slut dances a Minuet on the Grass before him: Let me die, but she is filly enough to think her Airs become her in my Love's Eyes. length she resolved to punish her Rivals. One Heifer she ordered barbarously to be yoked to the Plough; another she condemned to be sacrificed, and held the Entrails of the poor Victim in her Hand with all the infulting Triumph of a Rival: Now, fays she, having the Entrails in her Hand, now go and make yourfelf agreeable to my Dear. At one time the wishes to be Europa (k), at another lo: for one

110

Ft

⁽k) Europa was the Daughter of Agenor King of Cydon, beloved by Jupiter, and by him run away with in the Shape of a Bull.

Cui

11 ti

f

11

by

rif

Ti

(1) Ærope was the Wife of Atreus. She committed Adultery with her Husband's Brother Thyestes, by whom she had two Sons, whom Atreus caused to be killed, and served up to his Brother's Table. To avoid this Sight, the Sun is said to have gone backward.

(m) Scylla the Daughter of Nisus, King of the Megarensians, fell in love with Minos, while he was besieging her Father's City. She stole away her Father's Hair, on which the Fate of the City depended, and carried it to Minos; for which Fact the was rewarded by her Lover with Contempt only. She is of these was herself the Wife of a Bull, and the other made her Horse of one.

Filled with these Thoughts, she contrived the strangest Method of compleating her Desires. She sent for a Joiner of great Ingenuity, and ordered him to make her a large Cow of Wood. Into this she conveyed herself, and thus deceived Master Bull into her Embraces.

She conceived by this monstrous Coition, and brought forth an Offspring, which by his partaking equally of the human and taurine Form, betrayed her horrid Passion.

If the Cretan Lady (1) had abstained from the Love of Thyestes, (O! how Women distain Constancy to their Husbands!) the Sun had not stopt in the middle of his Career, and turned about his Face to the East, that he might avoid the bloody Banquet. God be praised! the Cuckolds of our Age are not so bloody in their Revenge.

The Daughter of Nisus (m), who stole her Papa's Hair, feeds hungry Dogs in those Parts which first set her a longing for Minos.

Agamemnon, after returning fafe from fo many bloody Campaigns, and from the dangerous Seas which he croffed, fell at last a dreadful Victim to the Whore his Wife (n).

Who

by some said to have been changed into a Lark: But Ovid, who here seems to consound two Stories together, makes her Transformation to have been into a Rock, which lies between Sicily and Italy; where the dashing of the Waves against the Rock, representing the Sound of the Barking of Dogs, gave rise to the Fable which is here hinted at.

(n) Clytemnestra, the Wife of Agamemuon, who in the Absence of her Husband committed Adultery with Ægysthus, and with him afterwards murdered Agamemuon, at his Return from

Sed

(o) Creusa was the Daughter of Creon King of Corinth, and fecond Wife to Jason; to whom Medea, enraged with Jason, who had forsaken her, sent a Casket in which Wild-Fire was inclosed, and by which she was burnt as soon it was opened. This Medea afterwards, on account of the same Anger with Jason, tore to pieces her two Sons which she had bore to him.

(p) This Phanix having incenfed his Father, by lying with a Woman who was beloved by the latter, fled to the Protection of Peleus the Father of Achilles, and was by him made Preceptor of that young Hero.

Who hath not wept at the fad Story of Creiisa? consumed by the Flames of a Sorceres, who afterwards drenched her Hands in the Blood of her own Children (0).

Phania (p), the Son of Amyntor, hath often paid many a Tear for his Amours, though he had not the wretched Fate of Hippolytus (q), to be torn

And thou, O Phineus (r)! why dost thou indulge that Jade Harpalice, by digging out the Eyes

1.

35

10

46

50

ed

on,

vas

ed.

ith

to 1 a

of

of

felf.
All these have been the Effects of Womens raging Desires, which are so much more violent of thy Children & Believe me, Divine Vengeance will hereafter inflict the same Punishment on thy-and mad than ours.

Come on then, and doubt not the Conquest of any Girl whatever: there is not one in a thousand who will deny you.

And even those who will deny you, love to be put to the Question; if you are disappointed therefore, your Repulse will be attended with no Danger.

But why should you apprehend any Disappointment, when every new Amour pleases them, and they all hanker after the Lovers and Husbands of other Women?

This

(q) Hippolytus being beloved by his Stepmother Phædra, and refusing to gratify her Desires, was by her falsely accused to his Father Theseus; upon which account he was obliged to fly, and the Chariot Horses being frighted by Sea-Calves, dashed the Chariot to-pieces, and him also.

(r) Phineus King of Arcadia, having repudiated his Wife Cleopatra, married Harpalice; by whose Instigation he put out the Eyes of his Sons: for which he was afterwards punished by Divine Vengeance with the Loss of his own.

De	Arte	Ama	ndi.
100		Care Catalana and

Lib. I.

	-		Δ
٠.	4		×	×	٦
ò	а	ŀ.	и	٠	9

40 De Mite Milandi.	10. 1.
Sed prius ancillam captandæ nôsse puellæ
Cura sit: accessus molliat ille tuos.
Proxima confiliis dominæ sit ut illa videto:
Neve parum tacitis conscia fida jocis.
Hanc tu pollicitis, banc tu corrumpe rogando:	355
Quod petis, è facili, si volet illa, feres.
Illa legat tempus (medici quoque tempora servant)	1.7
Quo facilis dominæ mens sit, & apta capi.
Mens erit apta capi tunc, cum lætissima rerum,
Ut seges in pingui luxuriabit bumo.	360
Pectora dum gaudent nec funt adstricta dolore;
Ipsa patent; blandâ tum subit arte Venus:
Tum, cum tristis erat, defensa est Ilios armis:
Militibus gravidum læta recepit equum.
Tum quoque tentanda est, cum pellice læsa dolebit.	• 187
Tunc facies, operâ ne sit inulta tuâ.	366

Hanc

This I am afraid is too natural in all things. The Corn in our Neighbour's Field feems always to flourish beyond our own; and we think our own Cow gives less Milk than his.

However, before you attack any Lady, make first sure of her Maid; for she will pave the Way to your Addresses.

If the Lady have many Females about her Person, take care to secure her who is most in the Considence of her Mistress; and who will faithfully betray to you all her private Conversation.

When you have found this Confidant out, corrupt her with Promises and Intreaties; for she can foon bring you to the End of your Desires, if she pleases.

Let her watch the Opportunity, (Physicians will tell you the Use of attending proper Seasons) when the Mind of your Mistress is easy, and apt for your Purpose.

This Season, I apprehend, is when she is in the best Humour; for Love then becomes luxuriant in her Mind, as Corn doth in a rich Soil.

When the Heart is full of Gladness, and bound up by no Vexation, it is open; and then the Compliments of a Lover will easily find an Admission.

Remember, Troy was defended while it remained in a fullen Mood, and opened its Gates to the armed Horse, when it was full of Good-Humour, and drunk with Joy.

Yet every Vexation should not deter you; for if your Mistress should be uneasy at the Falshood of her Husband, then is a proper time to attack her, and to assist her in revenging the Injury.

42 De Arte A	mandi. Lib. I.
Hanc matutinos pectens ancilla	capillos
Incitet : & velo remigis add
Et secum tenui suspirans murn	sure dicat,
Ut puto, non poteris ipsa rej	ferre vicem. 370
Tunc de te narret : tunc persui Addat : & insano juret amo
Sed propera, ne vela cadant, i Ut fragilis glacies, interit i
Quæris, an banc ipsam prosit	vitiare ministram?
Talibus admissis alea grandis	inest. 376
Hæc à concubitu fit sedula; ta	ardior illå:
Hæc dominæ munus te para	t; illa sibi:
Casus in eventu est: licet bæc	indulgeat ausis,
Consilium tamen est abstinuis	Te meum. 380
Non ego per præceps & acuta	cacumina vadam:
Nec juvenum quisquam, me	duce, captus erit.
	The state of the s

Yes every Vezation about a nec deter x

hat, and to addit har in fevenger 'data

When your Mistress is in this Humour, let Abigail while combing her Hair at the Toilette in a Morning, stir her up to Vengeance. This will under-hand promote your Voyage: for while you openly manage your Sails, she works under the Water with her Oars.

Now let Abigail with a foft Sigh mutter to her felf: Ah! poor Lady, I am afraid it is not in your power alone to revenge your Husband's Perfidy!

Then let her introduce a Discourse of you; let her say something in your Favour, and swear that you are gone distracted and dying for Love.

But no Time must be lost; lest the Passions she hath raised should again subside; and Resentment intervene by Delay, and freeze up her Love as Ice doth Water.

And here perhaps you will ask a Question, Whether it is prudent to kiss the Agent herself. This is not easy to answer: for it is a mere Cast of the Dye, whether you succeed the better or the worse for it.

One Women is by Enjoyment made a more industrious Solicitor, another becomes just the reverse. One thinks of procuring the Pleasures she hath tasted for her Mistress, another of securing them herself.

I.

The Event is doubtful; and though she may be easy enough to be had, my Advice is, abstain from the Consident: for I will not imitate the Empyric in striking bold Strokes; nor will I lead my Scholars over a Precipice. I give no Advice but what is safe, nor shall any Youth by sollowing my Precepts run himself into Rosamond's Pond.

If therefore the Girl who goes between you and your Mistress, pleases you in her Person as well

44 De Ar	te Amandi.	Lib. 1.
Si tamen illa tibi dum de Corpore, non tantum		entry The girls.
Fac domina potiare priù	s: comes illa sequetur:	385
Hoc unum moneo (si qui		Water w Now I her Jeff
Aut nunquam tentes, au	it perfice : tollitur inde	x, The
Cùm semel in partem	criminis illa venit.	390
Non avis utiliter viscati.	s effugit alis :	nand Tagana
Non bene de laxis ca		ions doy
Saucius arrepto piscis re		Hat in
Perprime tentatam:	But the second of the second o	ka i iind
Tunc neque te prodet con		395
Fastaque erunt domin	næ, dictaque nota tibi.	l bnA ;
Sed bene celetur : bene		Whether
Notitiæ suberit sempe	era a lare de la lare de la lare
Tempora qui solis operos	Particular at 2000 and a fine of the Kill of the Con-
Fallitur, & nautis a		400
Nec semper credenda Ce	res fallacibus arvis:
Nec semper viridi con	ncava puppis aquæ:

as in her Diligence; enjoy the Mistress first, and the Maid falls of course; but never begin with the latter.

One thing however I must admonish you, (if my Art deserves any Credit, and my Words are to be regarded as any thing better than Wind) Either never attempt the Confident, or go thorough stitch with her: for by making her particeps criminis you take away her Evidence.

This Doctrine you may learn from all other Sportsmen: for if a Bird escapes with Birdlime on his Wings, or a Boar breaks through the Toils, or a Fish gets off from the Hook; they are all sure to alarm their Companions, and spoil the Sport of the Fowler, the Hunter, or the Fisher. If once therefore you attempt her, press her to it with all your Vigour, and never leave her till you have enjoyed her.

For when once she is involved in the same Guilt with yourself, you are sure she will not betray you. Nay, you may be assured further, that she will betray every Word and Action of her Mistress to you.

But take particular care not to blab any of the Secrets she discloses to you: for while her Mistress hath no Suspicion of her Consident, she will be able to lay her entirely open to your Knowledge.

And now, to resume that Matter, believe me, he is deceived, who thinks that none but the Farmer and Mariner are obliged to regard the Seasons: for as it is not proper at all times to commit the Corn to the fallacious Fields, nor to trust your Vessel at all times to the green Ocean; so neither

Nec teneras semper tutum est captare puellas: Sæpe dato melius tempore fiet idem.

Sive dies suberit natalis, sive calenda,

Quas Venerem Marti continuasse juvat;

Sive erit ornatus, non ut fuit ante, figillis, Sed regum ex positas Circus babebit opes :

Differ opus: tunc triftis byems, tunc Pleiades infant; Tunc tener æquorea mergitur Hædus aqua.

Tunc bene definitur: tunc, fi quis creditur alto, Vix tenuit lacera naufraga membra ratis.

Tu licet incipias, qua flebilis Allia luce

Vulneribus Latiis sanguinolenta fuit :

Quâque die redeunt rebus minus apta gerendis

Culta Palastino septima festa Syro, Magna superstitio tibi sit natalis amicæ:

Quaque aliquid dandum est, illa sit atra dies.

Cum bene vitaris, tamen auferet : invenit artem Fæmin, qua cupidi carpat amantis opes.

420

Institor ad dominam veniet discinctus emacem: Expediet merces teque sedente suas.

Quas

(s) The Romans paid a Religious Regard to their Birth-Day, as appears from many Passages in their Poets. At this time they used to receive Presents from their Relations and Acquaintance. We have here given the Sense of the Original, only varying the Customs (Kalendæ Martii.) Ovid advises the Lover to abitain from vifiting his Mistress in the Kalends of March. At which time the Matronalia were celebrated to Juno Lucina, and the Husbands used to pray to that Goddess to protect the Chastity of their Wives. Horace likewise Lib. III. Ode 8. hints that this was not the proper Season for Batchelors to give a Loose neither is it always safe to attack a tender Girl, for she will be taken at one time who will resist at another. If it be for instance her Birth-day (3), perhaps, her Grandmother hath instructed her to be particularly cautious on that day; so if it be the Day of the Week on which Childermas hath happened to fall that Year; or King Charles's Martyrdom: defer the attack at all such Seasons. For to speak in Sea-Language, then is dirty Weather (1), then it blows a Hurricane; and if you weigh Anchor at that Season, you will be scarce able to keep your Keel downwards.

0

0

75

y, ie

1-ly

er

b.

a,

ne ts

to

Above all avoid your Mistres's Birth day; nor will it be more prudent in you to visit her first on the Morning of Valentine's Day (u), you will pay more for being her Valentine than it is worth. Indeed all Seasons which give them any Hint of receiving Presents should be carefully avoided: for be never so cautious and sneaking, have it of you she will. They all very well know the Art of squeezing a Lover who longs to squeeze them.

Mr.

to their Gaieties. (Sive erit ornatus Circus, &c.) A third Caution Ovid gives, is not to visit on those Days when the Wealth of the Roman Conquests were exposed to the Circus, in admiring which, as Mycellus observes, the Girls were too much taken up, to attend to the Desires of their Lovers. To say the truth, some Custom seems to be alluded to here, which is not sufficiently preserved from the Ruins of Antiquity.

(t) Then the Pleiades are at band. Then the Goat is merged in the Sea, viz. in the Months of Odober and November.

(u) The Original points at the Day in which the Romans were overthrown by the Gauls on the Banks of the River Allia. This was the 15th of the Kalends of August A. U. C. 363, and it was marked as a black Day in their Kalendar. As this Nation is too happy to produce any such Day, we have been obliged to give it a different Turn in our Paraphrase.

40	De Africe Paniandi.	L10, 1
Quas illa,	, inspicias, sapere ut videare rogal	bit:
	deinde dabit, deinde rogabit, emas.	al line of
	contentam multos jurabit in annos.	425
Nunc of	pus esse sibi, nunc bene dicet, emi.	12. C 100 51
	domi, quos des, causabere nummos	Day of 4
Littera	poscetur, ne didicisse juvat.	or parred
Quid, qua	si natali cum poscit munera libo,
Et quoti	ies opus est, nascitur illa sibi?	430
Quid cum	mendaci damno mæstissima plorat,
Elapsus	que cavâ fingitur aure lapis?
Multa roga	ant reddenda dari, data reddere not	lunt.
Perdis;	& in damno gratia nulla tuo est.
Non mihi,	sacrilegas meretricum ut persequan	artes,
Cum tota	idem linguis sint satis ora decem.	436
Cera vadur	m tentet rasis insusa tabellis:	an ad ful
Cera tua	e primum nuncia mentis eat.

set or discrete every character which the the street

All See the formation of the seed of the seed of the see of the seed of the se

Home action with a best field and a common with

Anniere t ma si mali i incremb a si evir ca

tion is the best of address as their Day, we have all on the state

Blanditias

Mr. * Deards will make his Appearance in his Silk Night-Gown, and unbundle his Packet in your Presence. The Lady will then desire you to look over his Trinkets, (she can do no less, you know, in Compliment to your Taste:) then she will make you a Present of a Kiss, and afterwards desire you to buy it.

"I promise you, my Dear," says she, "if you will but buy me this single Jewel, I will not ask another of you the Lord knows how long; but I have really a present Occasion for this,

" and besides it is the cheapest Thing I ever faw."

If you pretend to have no Money about you, the Answer is, O, my Dear, you may give your Note: Mr. Deards will take your Note. So that you may repent having learnt to write your Name. Then she adds, O la, I had almost forgot, it is my Birth-day, I am sure you will make me a Present on my Birth-day: for they can be born every Day in the Year to serve their Purpose. Or else she pretends to have lost a Drop from her Ear-Ring; this Loss makes her miserable, and sure, says she, if you loved me, you would repair that Loss.

Nay, some are not so honest as to desire a Present, they only borrow; but they are sure never to restore. By this Means you lose the Thing, without having the Merit of bestowing it.

In short, if I had ten Mouths, with ten Tongues in each, all would not suffice to display all the Arts by which Harlots pick the Pockets of their Cullies.

Begin then your Amour with an Epistle; let that break the Ice for you, and make the first Discovery of your Flame.

H

In

^{*} An eminent Joyner in London.

50.	De Arte Amandi. I	Lib. I.
Blanditias	ferat illa tuas, imitataque amantum
Verba:	nec exiguas, quisquis es, adde preces.	440
Hectora don	avit Priamo prece motus Achilles:
Flettitur	iratus, voce rogante, Deus.
Promittas f	acito; quid enim promittere lædit?
	dives quilibet esse potest.
Spes tenet in	tempus, semel est si credita longum :
Illa quie	lem fallax, sed tamen apta dea est.	446
Si dederis qu	uidquam, poteris ratione relinqui:
Præterit	um tulerit, perdideritque nibil.
Ad quod no	dederis, semper videare daturus:
	um sterilis sape fefellit ager.	450
Sic nè perdi	derit, non cessat perdere lusor:	1
Et revoca	at cupidas alea blanda manus.
Hoc opus,	ic labor est, primò sine munere jungi	:
	it gratis, que dedit, usque dabit.

to Count display and avail or shoot

In this you may insert all your little Blandishments, and Expressions of Fondness, nor be ashamed, however high your Quality is, to add the strongest Entreaties.

Remember that many a Rebel's Son hath had his Life spared at the Supplication of his Father; nay, the Wrath of Heaven itself is often averted by Prayer.

It is moreover my Advice to you, to be liberal of your Promises; for what Injury can you receive by Promising? This is a Treasure in which any Man may be rich.

Nor can your Mistress complain that she is abfolutely cheated, if you can bring her to believe your Promises. A lively Faith hath supported many a Man for a long Time: For though our Faith may sometimes deceive us, it is however a great and commodious Virtue.

Beware of giving: For when once your Miftress hath the Present in her Clutches, she may answer jilting you to her Prudence. She hath gained at least what she is in possession of, and cannot be faid to have loft any thing by the Bargain.

On the contrary, keep her still in Expectation. Seem always about to give, but never part with a Shilling: For in this Manner doth a barren Soil often deceive its Owner. Thus, that he may not be a Loser, the Gamester pushes on his ill Luck, and one flattering Throw makes him eager to have the Box again in his Hands.

Indeed the great Business is to enjoy your Mistress before she hath touched you. If she once yield to you gratis, she will continue to bestow her Favours still gratis, in Hopes of being at last rewarded for all her past Favours.

H 2

Epistolize

52	De Arte Amandi.	Lib. I.
Ergo eat, &	3 blandis peraretur littera verbis:	455
	que animos, primaque tentet iter.	ailtea
4 0,000	lippen pomo perlata fefellit:
	e est verbis capta puella suis.
	s artes (moneo,) Romana juventus;
	tum trepidos ut tueare reos.	460
	ulus, judexque gravis, lectusque seno	atus,
	vit eloquio victa puella manus.	= 102 la vires; nec sis in fronte disertus:
	it ceræ verba molesta tuæ.
	entis inops, teneræ declamat amicæ?	465
	ulens odii littera causa fuit.
-	dibilis sermo, consuetaque verba:
	tamen, presens ut videare loqui.
	ipiet scriptum, illectumque remittet;
	m spera, propositumque tene.	470
THE RESERVED	fficiles veniunt ad eratra juvenci:
	lenta pati frana docentur equi.
	iduo consumitur annulus usu:
	ssidua vomer aduncus bumo.
	is est saxo durum? quid mollius und	la? 475
	amen molli saxa cavantur agua.	173
		Penelopen
(w) Cydit	oppe was a beautiful virgin of the island

(w) Cydippe was a beautiful virgin of the island of Delos. She was celebrating the Rites of Diana when she was seen by Acontius, who falling in love with her, and not daring openly to declare his Passion, contrived to drop an Apple at her Feet, in which were inclosed these two Lines:

I fwear to you by the mystical Rites of Diana,

That I will attend you as a Companion, and become your Bride.

Epistolize therefore first; flatter and sooth her with tender Lines. Let these probe her Mind, and open the Way for your Addresses.

You know the Story of Cydippe (w), who was outwitted by a Letter inclosed in an Apple; by which Means she was made to speak Words she never intended.

I would advise the young Gentlemen of the Temple, to study the Arts of Persuasion, on other Accounts, besides that of defending Sheep-stealers at an Assizes: For a pretty Girl may be as easily captivated by Eloquence, as a Judge or Jury; and surely she is a much nobler Prize.

But here conceal your Art, and do not carry your Eloquence in your Face: And above all Things, beware of hard Words; for who but an empty Coxcomb ever made a verbose Declamation to his Mistress? By such Methods you may raise her Abhorrence more probably than her Love.

Let your Passion appear credible, and disclose it in easy and common Language; it may be as tender and warm as you please; but preserve the Stile of Conversation.

If she should not receive your Letter, but send it back unopened, hope for better Success another Time, and maintain your Purpose.

Time brings the stubborn Steer to bend his Neck to the Yoke, and the Horse to endure the Bridle.

Iron Bonds and Ploughshares are worn out by constant Use. What is harder than a Rock?

or

Cydippe took up the Apple and read the Lines; by repeating which Words they became her own; and she was ignorantly betrothed to her Lover: For it was a Law, that whatever any persons said in Diana's Temple, they were obliged to perform.

54 De Arte Amandi.	Lib. I:
Penelopen ipsam perstes modo, tempore vinces:
Capta vides sero Pergama; capta tamen.
Legerit, & nolit rescribere, cogere noli:
Tu modo blanditias fac legat ipsa tuas.	480
Quæ voluit legisse, volet rescribere lectis:
Per numeros venient ista gradusque suos.
Forstan & primo venient tibi littera tristis:
Quæque roget ne se sollicitare velis.	ngo.of
Quod rogat illa, timet : quod not rogat, optat ut	instes:
Insequere: & voti post modo compos eris.	486
Interea sive illa toro resupina feretur;
Lecticam dominæ dissimulantur adi.
Neve aliquis verbis odiosas afferat aures,
Quam potes ambiguis callidus abde notis.	490
Seu pedibus vacuis illi spatiosa teretur
Porticus; bic socias tu quoque junge moras
Et modo præcedas, facito: modo terga sequari	is;
Et modo festines: & modo lentus eas.
Nec tibi de mediis aliquot transire columnis	495
Sit pudor & lateri continuasse latus.

or what is fofter than Water? And yet hard Rocks are hollowed by foft Water.

Penelope herself in Time might have been conquered. You see Troy, though it defended itself fo long, was however taken at laft.

If she reads your Letters, but is unwilling to answer them, do not attempt to compel her. If she but reads your Fondness, it is sufficient.

If the will read, in Time the will answer what the reads. All these Matters will be brought about in their own good Time.

Perhaps the first Answer she sends you will be a cruel one, and may desire you to quit all future Solicitations.

She fears to be taken at her Word, and hopes you will not grant her Request. Follow her, and in Time you will obtain your Wishes.

If you meet her Chair, and the Curtains should be drawn, approach it as it were by Accident; and when you discover her there, whisper something tender in her Ear; but whisper softly, lest the Chairman, or any other impertinent Person, should over-hear you.

When she walks in the Mall, dangle after her, and interrupt her Walk with your Converfation.

Here you will have an Opportunity of feeing her Shape, and shewing her yours, by sometimes walking behind, and sometimes before her.

But for the most Part keep even pace with her, whether she trips along briskly, or only faunters.

Sometimes she will take a longer Walk, as far perhaps as the second or Third Stone. Hither follow her, and take every Opportunity of getting up close to her Side.

Never

56 De Arte Amandi.	Lib. I.
Nec sine te curvo sedeat speciosa theatro:
Quod spectes, humeris afferet illa suis.
Illam respicias, illam mirêre licebit:	tenemo comer
Multa supercilio, multa loquare notis.	500
Et plaudas aliquam mimo saltante puellam:
Et faveas illi; quisquis agatur amans.	me will
Cum surgit, surges: donec sedet illa, sedebis;
Arbitrio dominæ tempora perde tuæ.
Sed tibi nec ferro placeat torquere capillos;	505
Nec tua mordaci punice crura teras.
Ista jube faciant, quorum Cybeleïa mater
Concinitur Phrygiis exululata modis.
Forma viros neglecta decet. Minoïda Theseus
Abstulit a nulla tempore comptus acu.	510
Hippolytum Phædra, nec erat bene cultus, ama	vit;
Cura Deæ Sylvis aptus Adonis erat.

Stradings the will take a length Welld present, as the fested on I mid Stone. follow the could whe every Oncommittees

Munditiæ

Never let her go to the Play without attending her: No Matter what the Play is, she will bring fufficient Entertainment for you with her.

Here keep your Eyes always intent on her only, and admire every Thing about her. By your Eyes, and by Signs, you may inform her of many Things.

I.

Be fure to applaud greatly any amorous wanton Dance; and be no less favourable to those Scenes where the Business of Love is transacted, and almost brought to a Conclusion on the Stage: Many of which occur in Congreve, Vanbrugh, and Wycherly.

If the rifes between the Acts, rife also; if the lits, as fometimes Ladies do, to express their Contempt for the Audience, do you likewise keep your Seat. In a Word, conduct yourself entirely according to her Example and Pleafure.

Now with regard to your Person: Do not imitate some finical Petit Maître in his Toupet, much less in more detestable Effeminacies.

Tuck your Hair rather under your Hat, like the rough Fox-hunter, who traverses Hill and Dale to the Musick of the Horn.

A careless Air in Dress becomes a Man. Colonel Theseus (x) carried off Miss Ariadne in a Campaign Wig without a fingle Curl in it.

In the same Manner did Captain Hippolytus march off with Miss Phadra, though his Shock ⁽x) Ariadne was the Daughter of Minos King of Crete. She fell in Love with Theseus, and with a Clew of Thread helped him out of the Labyrinth into which he went to kill the Minotaur. He afterwards basely deserted the poor Lady, of which our Poet will presently tell the Story.

De Arte Amandi. Lib. I	I.
Munditiæ placeant; fuscentur corpora campo;
Sit bene conveniens, & fine labe toga.
Linguaque nec rigeat : careant rubigine dentes ; 51	15
Nec vagus in laxâ pes tibi pelle natet.
Nec malè deformet rigidos tonfura capillos;
Sit coma sit doctà barba resecta manu.
Et nihil emineant, & sint sine sordibus ungues;
Inque cavâ nullus stet tibi nare pilus, 52	20
Nec male odorati sit tristis anhelitus oris;
Nec lædat nares virque paterque gregis.
Catera lasciva faciant concede puella:
Et si quis male vir queret habere virum.
Ecce suum vatem Liber vocat, bic quoque amantes 52	25
Adjuvat; et flamme, quâ calet ipse, favet.
Gnossis in ignotis amens errabat arenis,
Quâ brevis æquoreis Dia feritur aquis.
Utque erat è somno tunica velata recineta,
37 , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,	30
Thefea crudelem furdas clamabat ad undas,
Indigno teneras imbre rigante genas:
Clamabat, flebatque simul (sed utrumque decebat)
Nec facta est lacrymis turpior illa suis
Y	35
Perfidus ille abiit, quid mihi fiet ? ait.	,.
Quid mibi fiet? ait: sonuerunt cymbala toto
Littore, & attonitâ tympana pulsa manu.

Excidit illa metu, rupitque novissima verba;

Nullus in examini corpore sanguis erat.

Head of Hair never had any Powder in it: nay, Lady Venus herself chose young Jack Adonis in a Jockey Coat and Buckskin Breeches.

Cleanlines however is agreeable: Let your Face be burnt with the Sun; but let your Cloaths be well made, and without a Spot on them.

Wash your Mouth, and clean your Teeth often; let your Beard be close shaved, and your Nails short and free from Dirt.

Observe these Documents, and leave all other Niceties to the Women, and to Men who defire to fupply their Places.

But now Bacchus summons his Poet. He likewife affifts Lovers, and favours the Flame which warms himself.

The Cretan Lady having jumped out of Bed in a raving Fit, wandered on the foreign Shore of Dia. She had nothing on but a loose wrapping Gown, without Stockings or Cap: and her Hair hung dishevelled over her Shoulders. She complained of the Cruelty of Theseus to the deep Waves, whilst an unworthy Shower of Tears ran down her Cheeks. She wept, and lamented aloud, and both became her; nor did her Tears diminish her Beauty. Once, again, she beat her delicious Breasts with her Hands, and cried aloud, The perfidious Man bath abandoned me; What will become of poor Ariadne? What will become of poor Ariadne? On a sudden a vast Multitude was heard, while many Kinds of strange Instruments, like those of the miserable Masons, accompanied the Voices. The poor Lady funk with Fear, and suppressed her last Words; nor did the least Blood remain in her Countenance. And now behold the Bacchanalian Women, Ecce Mimallonides sparsis in terga capillis; Ecce leves Satyri, prævia turba Dei.

Ebrius ecce senex pando Silenus ascello, Vix sedet, & pressas continet arte jubas,

Dum sequitur Bacchus, Bacchæ fugiuntque petuntque, Quadrupedum ferulâ dum malus urget eques; 546

In caput aurito cecidit delapsus asello;

Clamarunt Satyri; Surge, age, surge pater.

Jam Deus è curru, quem summum texerat uvis, Tigribus adjunctis, aurea lora dabat. 550

Et color, & Theseus, & vox abière puellæ;
Terque fugam petit, terque retenta metu est.
Horruit, ut steriles, agitat quas ventus, aristæ;
Ut levis in madidå canna palude tremit.

Cui Deus, En adsum tibi cura fidelior, inquit; 555
Pone metum; Bacchi, Gnossias, uxor eris.

Munus habe cælum; cælo spectabere sydus; Sæpe reges dubiam, Cressa corona, ratem.

Dixit, & è curru, ne tigres illa timeret, Desilit : imposito cessit arena pede.

Impli-

Women, with their Hair about their Ears, and the light Satyrs, who are always Forerunners of the God. Behold old Master Silenus (y) as drunk as a Piper, riding on an Ass, which he is hardly able either to fit or guide. The old Gentleman, endeavouring to follow the Bacchanalians, who fly from him and towards him, fets Spurs to his Ass, which being a vicious Beaft, kicked up. and threw him over his Ears: upon which all the Satyrs fet up a loud Shout, crying out, Rife, Father, rife and be d-nd to you. And now the God himself, high mounted on his Four-Wheel Chaife, the Top of which was adorned with Grapes, and which he drove himself, slung his Golden Reins over the Backs of his Pair of Tygers. Poor Ariadne's Colour forfook her Cheeks, and Theseus and her Voice at once deserted her Thrice she attempted to fly, and thrice Lips. being retained, she grew stiff with Fear, and stood trembling as Corn waves in the Field, or Reeds on the River Bank, when fanned by the Wind. To whom the God; Behold, Madam, a more faithful Lover at your Feet: Fear nothing, Lady fair, you shall be the Wife of Bacchus. The Sky shall be your Dowry, where shining in a bright Constellation, by the Name of Ariadne's Crown, you shall often direct the doubtful Mariner's Passage. He faid; and leaping from his Chariot, left Ariadne should be afraid of the Tygers, the Sand funk under the Weight of his Feet; and catching ⁽y) Silenus was the Pedagogue of Bacchus, and his Foster-Father: He was likewise his Companion on all Occasions; and is often introduced in his drunken Mood by our Poet.

Implicitamque sinu (neque enim pugnare valebat)
Abstulit; ut facile est omnia posse Deo.
Pars Hymenæe canunt ; pars clamant Evie, Evoe	;
Sic coëunt sacro nupta Deusque toro.	elds.
Ergo, ubi contigerint positi tibi munera Bacchi,	565
Atque erit in socii fæmina parte tori.
Nytteliumque patrem, nocturnaque sacra precare,
Ne jubeant capiti vina nocere tuo.
Hic tibi multa licet sermone latentia tecto
Dicere; quæ dici sentiat illa sibi,	570
Blanditiasque leves tenui prescribere vino;
Ut dominum in mensâ se legat illa tuam:
Atque oculos oculis spectare fatentibus ignem,	•
Sæpe tacens vocem, verbaque vultus habet.
Fac primus rapias illius tacta labellis	575
Pocula; quaque bibit parte puella, bibas.
Et quemcumque cibum digitis libaverit illa,
Tu pete: dumque petes, sit tibi tasta manus.

Sint

her instantly in his Arms, he carried her, who was incapable of scratching, directly off; (for every Thing, we know, is in the Power of a Deity:) And now, whilst Part of his Train sing the Hymenæum, and others cry Evie Evoe, two very mysterious Words, and full of Masonry, the God and his new-ravished Bride go together, between a Pair of sacred Sheets.

Whenever therefore you happen to be in Company with a pretty Girl over a Bottle, pray heartily to Bacchus, and invoke his nocturnal Rites, that the Wine may not get into your Head. You may now take an Opportunity to toast some Nymph by a sictitious Name, of whom you may say an hundred amorous Things; all which, with the least Assistance, she will readily apply to herself. Double Entendres likewise may be used. You may moreover draw certain Figures in Wine on the Table; and after having spoken of your Mistress in the third Person, you may take this Method of writing her Name, and convincing her, that she herself is the Goddess.

0

But let your gloating Eyes inform her of your Passion: for an expressive Countenance often finds both Words and Utterance.

When she drinks, receive the Cup from her; and let her see you industrious to find out the Place before pressed by her Lips; and then drink eagerly at the same.

And whatever Part of the Meat she shall touch with her Fingers, do not fail to give the Preference to that: if in catching at it, you touch her Hand into the Bargain, it is the better.

But

6	4 De Arte Amandi.	Lib. I.
Si	int etiam tua vota, viro placuisse puelle;
4.6	Utilior votis factus amicus erit.	580
H	luic, si forte bibas, sortem concede priorem:
	Huic detur capiti dempta corona tuo.
Si	ve sit inferior, seu par, prior omnia sumat:
	Neu dubites illi verba secunda loqui.	584
	Tuta frequensque via est, per amici fallere	nomen:
	Tuta frequensque licet sit via, crimen habet.
In	nde propinator nimium quoque multa propinet,
	Et sibi mandatis plura videnda putet.
Ci	erta tibi à nobis dabitur mensura bibendi:
	Officium præstent mensque pedesque suum.	590
70	urgia præcipuè vino stimulata caveto:
	Et nimium faciles ad fera bella manus.
0	ccidit Eurytion stulte data vina bibendo:
	Aptior est dulci mensa merumque joco.
Si	vox est, canta; si mollia brachia, salta:	595
	Et quacunque potes dote placere, place.

Ebrietas

But above all Things, let it be your Endeavour to please her Keeper, if she have any: For to make a Friend of him will be very useful to you both.

When you are at Table, let him be always helped first, and to the most elegant Tid-Bit; and when you drink together, offer him always the Place of Toast-maker; whether he be your Inferiour or your Equal, let him always choose before you, and be not ashamed to trowel him well over with Flattery.

It is a fafe and common Way to deceive under Pretence of Friendship; I must own, however fafe and common it is, it is not altogether blameless.

This is indeed a Dishonesty not very unlike that of a Major Domo, who under the Colour of Friendship empties your Cellars of your Wine, by pushing the Bottle further than is necessary.

Now to fix a certain Stint to your Cups, I allow you never to drink till your Head becomes giddy, and your Feet begin to totter.

Beware of Quarrels, which are often occasioned by Wine. Let not your Hands be too ready to strike in your Cups.

Remember the old Story of the Wedding of Pyrothous (z) and many more where drunken Fools by being quarrelsome in their Liquor have come short home. A Drinking Bout is in Reality a K properer

⁽²⁾ At this Wedding Eurytion the Centaur getting drunk, attempted to ravish Hippodamia the Bride of Pyritheus, but Theseus knocked his Brains out with a Bowl. Upon this a Battle ensued between the Centaurs and the Lapithæ, who defending the Cause of their Prince Pyrithous, destroyed almost all the Centaurs. Horace Lib. I. Ode 18. mentions this Story likewise, as a Caution to Men not to be quarressome in their Cups.

600

605

Ebrietas ut vera nocet, sic facta juvabit; Fac titubet blæso subdola lingua sono.

Et quicquid dices, faciesque protervius aquo, Credatur nimium causa fuisse merum.

Et bene dic dominé; bene, cum quo dormiet illa;

Sed male sit tacità mente precare viro.

At, cum discedit mensa conviva remota, (Ipsa tibi accessus turba, locumque dabit)

Insere te turbæ; leviterque admotus eunti,

Velle latus digitis; & pede tange pedem.

Colloquio jam tempus adest. Fuge, rustice, longe Hinc, pudor; audacem Forfque Venusque juvant.

Non

properer Scene for Joke and Mirth, than for Fighting.

I proceed to other Lessons (a). If you have a Voice, then fing; if you have handsome Legs, cut Capers, or flide into the Minuet Step. short, endeavour to please your Mistress, by exerting those Talents in which Nature hath given you to excel.

Now, as real Drunkenness may be hurtful to you, fo you may fometimes reap Advantages by pretending yourfelf in Liquor, by Stammering or Lisping a little slyly: For then if you should descend to some Expressions of the grosser Kind, it will be imputed to your having taken a Cup too much.

Drink Bumpers to the Health of your Mistress, and of the Gentleman with whom she is obliged to fleep; but I do not infift on your being extremely fincere on this Occasion; for you may heartily wish him hanged at the same Time, if you please.

When the Company rifes to go away, there is always a Confusion in the Room, of which you may take Advantage. You may then creep close up to your Mistress, may perhaps palm her, and gently tread on her Toes.

Whenever you have an Opportunity of speaking to her privately, be not bashful like a Country Boobily Squire. Remember Fortune and Love both favour the Bold.

I do not intend to lay down any Rules for your Oratory on this Occasion. Do but begin boldly, and you will be Eloquent of course:

⁽a) Here and in many other Places, we have been obliged to supply that Connection, which is greatly wanting in the Original.

Op De Hite Hillandi.	alilo. X.
Non tua sub nostras veniet facundia leges;	100
Fac tantum incipias, sponte disertus eris.	610
Est tibi agendus amans, imitandaque vulnera ver	bis:
Hie tibi quæratur qualibet arte fides.	6.0 75
Nec credi labor est; sibi quaque videtur amanda;	is allies
Pessima sit, nulli non sua forma placet.
S.epe tamen vere capit simulator amare;	615
Sæpe, quod incipiens finxerat, esse fuit.	Gir you.
Quo magis ô faciles imitantibus este puellæ;	9106-210
Fiet amor verus, qui modo fictus erat.
Blanditiis animum furtim deprendere fas fit;	d lievis
Ut pendens liquida ripa subitur aqua.	620
Nec faciem, nec te pigeat laudare capillos,
Et teretes digitos, exiguumque pedem.
Delectant etiam castas præconia formæ:
Virginibus curæ grataque forma sua est.	624
Nam sur in Phrygiis Junonem & Pallida Sylvis,
Non quoque judicium non tenuisse pudet?	4.00
Laudatas oftendit avis Junonia pennas:
Si tacitus spectes, illa recondet opes.

Quadrupedes

Set this only before you, that you are to act the Part of a Lover, to talk of Wounds and Darts, and Dying and Despair, and all that, as Mr. Bayes says: For if you can once make her believe you are in Love, your Business is done. To create therefore this Faith in her, you must employ every Art of which you are Master.

Nor is this indeed so difficult a Task: For every Woman believes herself to be the Object of Love; be she never so ugly, she is still amiable in her own Eye.

Sometimes indeed no Deceit is in the End put on the Woman, for her pretended Lover becomes often a real one, and is the very Creature which he before personated.

And by the Way, young Ladies, let me tell you this is no small Encouragement to you, to countenance such Pretences; for if you manage well, you may often inspire a Man with Love in Earnest, while he is endeavouring to impose a factitious Passion upon you.

But to return to my Scholars. Flatter with all your Might: for the Mind is taken as it were by Stealth, by Flattery, even as the Bank which hangs over a River is undermined by the liquid Waves.

Never be weary therefore of commending her Face, or her Hair; her taper Arm, or her pretty little Foot.

The chaftest Matrons are fond of hearing the Praises of their Beauty; and the purest Virgins make the Charms of their Persons at once their Business and their Pleasure.

What else is meant by that ancient Fable of Juno and Pallas, whom the Greek Poets represent as yet ashamed of the Conquest obtained by Venus.

70	De Arte Amandi.	Lib. I.
	iter rapidi certamina cursus,
Depenæque	jubæ, plausaque colla juvant.	630
Nec timide pron	nitte: trabunt promissa puellas.
Pollicitis teste	es quossibet adde Deos.
Jupiter ex alto	perjuria ridet amantum,
	Folios irrita ferre Notos.
Per Styga Juno	mi falso jurare solebat	635
Jupiter: ex	emplo nunc favet ipse suo.
Expedit esse D	leos; &, ut expedit, esse putema	is;
Dentur in a	ntiquos thura merumque focos.
Nec Secura qui	es illos similisque sopori
Detinet ; im	nocui vivite numen adest.	640

Reddite

This Vanity seems to extend itself to Animals, in many of which we may observe some Traces of it.

The Peacock, if you feem to admire her, spreads forth her Golden Plumes, which she never displays to an indifferent Spectator.

The Race-Horse, while he is running for a Plate, enjoys the Beauties of his well-combed

Mane, and gracefully turned Neck.

Secondly, to Flattery, add Promises, and those not timorous nor sneaking ones. If a Girl insists upon a Promise of Marriage, give it her, and bind it by many Oaths *: for no Indiament lies for this fort of Perjury.

The Antients vented horrid Impieties on this Occasion, and introduced Jupiter shaking his Sides at the Perjuries of Lovers, and ordering the Winds to puff them away: Nay, he is said to have forsworn himself even by Styx to Juno; and therefore, say they, he encourages Men to sollow his Example.

But though a Christian must not talk in this Manner, yet I believe it may be one of those Sins which the Church of Rome holds to be venial, or rather venal.

I would here by no Means be suspected of Infidelity or Profaneness. It is necessary there should be a God; and therefore we must believe there is; nay, we must worship him: For he doth not possess himself in that indolent State in which the Deities of Epicurus are depictured. If we live innocent Lives,

^{*} This is the most exceptionable Passage in the whole Work. We have endeavoured to soften it as much as possible; but even as it now stands, we cannot help expressing our Detestation of this Sentiment, which appears shocking even in a Heathen Writer.

De Arte Amandi.	Lib. I.
Reddite depositum; pietas sua fædera servet:
Traus absit vacuas cædis babete manus.
Ludite, fi sapitis, solas impune puellas;
Hac minus est und fraude pudenda fides.
Fallite fallentes; ex magna parte profanum	645
Sunt genus ; in laqueos, quos posuere, cadant
Dicitur Ægyptos caruisse juvantibus arva
Imbribus, atque annos ficca fuisse novem;
Cum Thrafius Busirin adit, monstratque priari
Hospitis effuso sanguine posse Joven;	650
Illi Busiris, Fies Jovis hostia primus,	1/ /
Inquit; & Egypto tu dabis hospes aquam.
Et Phalaris tauro violenti membra Perilli Torruit; infelix imbuit autor opus.
Justus uterque fuit; neque enim lex equior ulla e	A,
Qu'am necis artifices arte perire suà.	656
Ergo (ut perjuras merito perjuria fallant)
Exemplo doleat fæmina læsa suo.

Lives, we may depend on the Care of his Providence.

Restore faithfully whatever is deposited in your Hands: Be just in all your Contracts: Avoid all Kind of Fraud, and be not polluted with Blood. A wise Man will be a Rogue only among the Girls: For in all other Articles a Gentleman will be ashamed of breaking his Word.

And what is this more than deceiving the Deceivers? The Sex are for the greatest Part Impostors; let them therefore fall in the Snares which they have spread for others.

Perhaps you have never read the Justice of Busiris; when Egypt was burnt up Nine Years together for want of Rain, one Thrasius a Foreigner came to Court, and being introduced to the King by Clementius Cotterelius, he acquainted his Majesty, that Jupiter was to be propitiated by the Blood of a Stranger. The King answered him, Then thou thyself shalt be the first Victim, and with thy foreign Blood shalt give Rain to Egypt.

To the same Purpose is the Story of Phalaris, who roasted the Limbs of Perillus in his own Bull: Thus making Proof of the Goodness of the Work by the Torments of the unhappy Maker.

Now there was great Justice in both these Examples; for nothing can be more equitable than that the Inventers of Cruelty should perish by their own Art.

To apply this to our present Purpose: As there is no Deceit or Perjury which Women will stick at putting in use against us, let them lament the Consequence of their own Examples.

74 De Arte Amandi. Li	b.
Et lacrymæ profunt; lacrymis adamanta movebis
Fac madidas videat, si potes, illa genas.
Si lacrymæ (neque enim veniunt in tempore semper) Deficient, uda lumina tange nanu.
Quis sapiens blandis non misceat oscula verbis?	Y /5
Illa licet non det, non data sume tamen.	10%
Pugnabit primo fortassis, &, improbe, dicet; Pugnando vinci se tamen illa volet.	665
Tantum ne noceant teneris male rapta labellis,
Neve queri possit, dura fuisse, cave:
Oscula qui sumpsit, si non & cætera sumet;	Aluka.
Hæc quoque, quæ data sunt, perdere dignus	erat.
Quantum defuerat pleno post oscula voto!	671
Hei mibi, rusticitas non pudor ille fuit.
Vim licet appellent; grata est vis ista puellis;
Quod juvat, invitis sape dedisse volunt.
Quæcunque est subità Veneris violata rapina,	675
Gaudet; & improbitas muneris instar habet:

Programme Sile to Russerio La

Thirdly, Tears are of great Service. The Proverb tells you, Tears will move Adamant. If you can bring it about therefore, let your Mistress see your Cheeks a little blubbered upon Occasion.

If Tears should refuse to come (as they sometimes will) an Onion in your Handkerchief will be of great Use.

Fourthly, Kisses. What Lover of any Sense doth not mix Kisses with his tender Expressions! Perhaps she will not give them easily: No Matter, take them without her Leave.

Perhaps she will scratch, and say you are rude: Notwithstanding her Scratches, she will be pleased with your getting the better.

Do this, however, in so gentle a Manner, that you may not hurt her tender Lips; nor let her complain of being scrubbed with your Beard.

Now when you have proceeded to Kisses, if you proceed no farther, you may well be called unworthy of what you have hitherto obtained. When you was at her Lips, how near was you to your Journey's End! If therefore you stop there, you rather deserve the Name of a bashful 'Squire than of a modest Man.

The Girls may call this perhaps Violence; but it is a Violence agreeable to them: For they are often desirous of being pleased against their Will: For a Woman taken without her Consent, notwithstanding her Frowns, is often well satisfied in her Heart, and your Impudence is taken as a Favour; whilst she who, when inclined to be ravished, hath retreated untouched, however she may affect to smile, is in reality out of Humour.

Quio

al

bi

21

b

b

Ravishing is indeed out of Fashion in this Age; and therefore I am at a Loss for modern Examples; but antient Story abounds with them.

Miss (b) Phabe and her Sister were both ravished, and both were well pleased with the Men who ravished them.

Though the Story of Deidamia was formerly in all the Trojan News-Papers, yet my Reader may be pleased to see it better told.

Venus had now kept her Word to Paris, and given him the Beauty she had promised, not as a Bribe, but as a Gratification for his having made an Award in her Favour, in the famous Cause between Juno and others against Venus, in Trover for a Golden Apple; which was referred to him at the Assizes at Ida.

Paris, every one knows, no fooner had received Mrs. Helen, than he immediately carried her off to his Father's Court.

Upon this the Grecians entered into an Affociation; and feveral Noblemen raised Regiments at their own Expence, out of their Regard to the Public: For Cuckoldom was a public Cause, no one knowing whose Turn it would be next.

Lieutenant-General Achilles, who was to command a large Body of Grenadiers, which the Greeks call Myrmidons, did not behave hand-fomely on that Occasion, though he got off afterwards

⁽b) Phæbe and Ilaira were two pretty Girls, the Daughters of Leucippus, and by their Father betrothed to two Brothers Idas and Lynceus; but before the Celebration of their Nuptials, were ravished by Castor and Pollux. This ended in the Death of Castor, by the Hands of Lynceus; and of Lynceus, by Pollux, whose Death while Idas was attempting to revenge, he was struck dead by Thunder at the Feet of Pollux.

78	De Arte Amandi. Li	b. I.
The state of the s	Eacide? non sunt tua munera lana alia Palladis arte petas,
	n calathis? clypeo manus apta tenendo;
Pensa qu	d in dextrâ, quâ cadet Hector, habes?
	nctos operoso stamine fusos; a est ista Pelias basta manu.	695
	n thalamo virgo regalis eodem; a stupro comperit esse virum.
	quidem victa est; (ita credere oportet) vinci viribus illa tamen.	700
Sæpe, mane	dixit, cum jam properaret Achilles; n posita sumpserat arma colo.
	illa est? quid blanda voce moraris
Autorem Au	pri, Deidamia, tui?

Scilicet

terwards at a Court-Martial by pleading, that his Mother (who had a great deal in her own Power) had infifted on his acting the Part he did; for, I am ashamed to say, he dressed himself in Women's Clothes, and hid himself at the House of one Lycomedes, a Man of good Fortune in those Parts.

Fie upon it, General, I am ashamed to see you sit quilting among the Girls; a Sword becomes your Hands much better than a Needle.

What can you mean by that Work-Basket in a Hand by which Count Hector is to fall? Do you carry that Basket with you to put his Head in?

For Shame then, cast away your Huswife, and all those effeminate Trinkets from a Fist able to wield Harry the Fifth's Sword.

It happened, that at the same Time when the General, at the House of 'Squire Lycomedes, performed this Feat, Miss Deidamia, one of the Maids of Honour, was visiting at the same Place. This young Lady soon discovered that the General was a Man; for indeed he got her Maidenhead.

He ravished her, that is the Truth on't; that a Gentlemen ought to believe, in Favour of the Lady: But he may believe the Lady was willing enough to be ravished at the same Time.

When the General threw away his Needle, and grasped the Armour, (you must remember the Story, for it was in the Trojan Alamain) the young Lady began to change her Note, and to hope he would not forsake her so.

Ab! little Mia! is this the Violence you complained of? Is this the Ravisber you are afraid of? Why with that gentle Voice do you solicite the Author of your Dishonour to stay with you?

To

80 De Arte Amandi.	Lib. I.
Scilicet, ut pudor est, quiddam cæpisse priorem Sic alio gratum est incipiente pati.	; 705
Ab nimia est propriæ juveni siducia sormæ!
Expellet si quis, dum prior illa roget.
Vir prior accedat; Vir verba precantia dicat;
Excipiet blandas comiter illa preces.	710
Ut potiare, roga, tantum cupit illa rogari:
Da causam voti principiumque tui.
Jupiter ad veteres supplex boroïdas ibat;
Corripuit magnum nulla puella Jovem.	sein yn is di
Si tamen á precibus tumidos accedere fastus	715
Senseris; incepto parce, referque pedem.
Quod refugit, multæ cupiunt : odere quod inst	tat,
Lenius instando tædia tolle tui.	*
Nec spes est Veneris semper profitenda roganti	ok del to
Intret amicitiæ nomine tectus amor.	720
Hoc aditu vidi tetricæ data verba puellæ;	P
Quid fuerat cultor, factus amator erat.

Candidus

To come at once to the Moral of my Story; as they are ashamed to make the first Advances, so they are ready to suffer whatever a pushing Man can do unto them.

As for those pretty Master-Misses, the Adonis's of the Age, who confide in their own Charms, and desire to be courted by the Girls, believe me, they will stay long enough before they are asked the Question.

If you are a Man, make the first Overtures: Remember, it is the Man's Part to address the Fair; and it will be her's to be tenderly won.

Be bold then, and put the Question; she desires no more than to have the Question put; and sure you will not deny your own Wishes that Favour.

Jupiter himself went a courting to the Heroines of old: For I never heard of any Girl who courted him.

But if you find Madam gives herself any immoderate Airs at your Proposal, it will then be good to recede a little from your Undertaking, and to affect to sheer off: For many of them, according to the Poet,

Purfue what flies, and fly what doth purfue.

A fhort Absence will soon cure her Disdain.

It may be proper likewise to conceal your Intentions a little at first, and make your first Advance under the Pretence of Platonic Friendship.

I have known many a Prude taken under these false Colours; and the Platonic Friend hath soon become a happy Lover.

And now as to your Complexion; for believe me, this is a Matter of some Consequence:

M Though

De Arte Amandi.	110. I.
andidus in nauta turpis color; aquoris unda
Debet & à radiis syderis esse niger.
Turpis & agricolæ, qui vomere semper adunco,	725
Et gravibus rastris sub Jove versat humum.	de de
Et tu, Palladiæ petitur cui fama coronæ, Candida si fuerint corpora, turpis eris.
Palleat omnis amans; color bic est aptus amanti	B _E (c)
Hic decet; boc vultu non valuisse putent.	730
Pallidus in Lyrice sylvis errabat Orion; Pallidus in lentâ Naïde Daphnis erat.
Arguat & macies animum, nec turpe putâris
Palliolum nitidis imposuisse comis.
Attenuent juvenum vigilatæ corpora noctes,	735
Curaque &, è magno qui fit amore, dolor.
It voto potiare tuo, miserabilis esto;
Ut, qui te videat, dicere possit, Amas.
Conquerar, an moneam, mistum fas omne nefasq	nue?
Nomen amicitiæ, nomen inane fides.	740

Hei

740

Though I would not have you effeminate, yet I would have you delicate.

A fair Complexion in a Tar is scandalous, and looks more like a Borough Captain or one of those fresh-water Sailors, who have so much dishonoured our Navy. The Skin of a Seaman ought to be rough, and well battered with Winds and Waves.

Such likewise ought to be the Face of a Foxhunter, who ought not to fear Rain or Easterly Winds: And the same becomes the Soldier.

But let the Soldier of Venus look fair and delicate; nay, if your Complexion inclines to Paleness, so much the better; for this will be imputed by every young Girl to Love.

Young Orion (c) with a pale Countenance wandered through the Groves, being fick with the Love of Lyrice: And the fame Effect had the Love of Nais upon the Countenance of Daphnis (d); two Lovers very famous in Antiquity.

Leanness is another Token of a Lover; to obtain which, you need not take Physick; fitting up all Night; and writing Love-Letters, will bring this about.

Be fure to look as miserable as possible; so that every one who sees you, may cry, There goes a Lover.

And here shall I lament the Wickedness of Mankind, or only simply observe it to you? But in Reality all Friendship and Integrity are nothing more than Names.

Alas!

(d) Daphnis was the Son of Mercury; for his Love for this

Nais, we have here Ovid's Authority.

⁽c) Orion the Theban was in Love with Merope the Daughter of Enopian; but who this Lyrice was, is not so plain, no Mention being made of her in any other Place.

Pectora: mille animos excipe mille modis.

Convenit; hec oleis; bac bene farra virent:

Nec tellus eadem parit omnia: vitibus illa

84

Pestoribus

Alas! It is dangerous to be too prodigal in the Praises of your Mistress, even to your Friend; for if he believes you, he becomes your Rival.

It is true there are some old Stories of faithful Friends: Patroclus never made a Cuckold of Achilles; and Phadra's Chastity was never attempted by Pirithous.

Pylades loved Hermione, who was his Friend's Wife; but it was with the pure Love of a Brother: And the same Fidelity did Castor preserve towards his Twin-Brother Pollux.

But if you expect to find fuch Instances in these degenerate Days, you may as well have Faith enough to expect a Pine-Apple from a Pear-Tree, or to hope to fill your Bottle with Burgundy from the River.

I am afraid we are grown fo bad, that Iniquity itself gives a Relish to our Pleasures; and every Man is not only addicted to his Pleasures, but those are the sweeter, when season'd with another's Pain.

It is in short a terrible Case, that a Lover ought to fear his Friend more than his Enemy. Beware of the former, and you are fafe.

Beware of your Coufin, and your Brother, and your dear and intimate Companions. These are the Sort of Gentry, from whom you are to apprehend most Danger.

Here I intended to have finished; but one Rule more fuggests itself.

You are to note then, that there is a great Variety in the Tempers of Women; for a thousand different Women are to be wooed a thousand different Ways.

Mr. Miller will tell you, that the same kind of Soil is not proper for all Fruits. One produces good M 2

in a Calo that a Lorentzardi good Carrots, another Potatoes, and a third Turneps. Now there is as great a Variety of Dispositition in the human Mind, as there are Forms in the World: For which Reason a Politician is capable of accommodating himself to innumerable Kinds of Tempers: Not Proteus could indeed diversify himself more Ways than he can.

Nay you may learn this Lesson from every Fisherman; for some Fish are to be taken with one Bait, and some with another; others will scarce bite at any, but are however to be drawn out of the Water by a Net.

One good Caution under this Head, is to confider the Age of your Mistres: Old Birds are not taken with Chaff; and an old Hare will be sure to double.

Again, consider Circumstances. Do not frighten an ignorant Woman with Learning, nor a poor Country Girl with your fine Cloathes; for by these Means you will create in them too great an Awe of you. Many a Girl hath run away frighted from the Embraces of the Master, and afterwards fallen into the Clutches of his Footman.

And here we will now cast our Anchor, having finished the first Part of our intended Voyage.

to be not been a some de la la companya de are equality in the Mandacast block had hierakhat w Beltaldwellteboramores, la pidea A forted beganning of the second has the will a hindelf and a Wayshidhind Can Tolking Far to meet not beaut to be to be your to Fire instance of the fire each tole submitted and Mile and lone while hower added will March Most env. but one how suggest be desire will the West Lot a Net and a self One on Cantion and in the seed of the conconstant to the property of the principle of the principl reken uteh Chala in and the old rees off Proposition and the Market of Chick of Agging confider Circumfunces and the took of the the temperature which the string has a con-Courses with with your line Clockies; for by theis loovA minute of mailthe was Blanch tenth you hady a Girl light and away tion Denotes of the Waller, and therwards tilled ion the Clarence of Just commercial sections out that an above the same of The world was been the contained